

The Black Cat

Copyright, 1901, by The Shortstory Publishing Co.

P131.3

October 1901

The Yellow Light.
Henry Lyle.

The Spectrum Page.
Richard Barker Shelton.

Major Bruerton's Wooling.
Franklin B. Wiley.

The Window of Tonathlu.
Scott Irving Litchfield.

The Man from Beyond.
Frank Little Pollock.

Copyright, 1901, by The Shortstory Publishing Co.

THE SHORTSTORY PUBLISHING CO 144 HIGH ST BOSTON MASS.

It's Pears'
that's why!

Sold all over the world

The Swoboda System

Restores to Health, Strengthens the Heart

I am teaching intelligent men, brain workers, the ideal principles of attaining and preserving perfect health. It is not a problematical theory, but a system of physiological exercise, based upon absolutely correct scientific facts. And if you will follow my instructions for a few weeks I will promise you such a superb muscular development and such a degree of vigorous health as to forever convince you that intelligent direction of muscular effort is just as essential to success in life as intelligent mental effort. No pupil of mine will need to digest his food with pepsin nor assist nature with a dose of physic. I will give you an appetite and a strong stomach to take care of it; a digestive system that will fill your veins with rich blood; a strong heart that will regulate circulation and improve assimilation; a pair of lungs that will purify your blood; a liver that will work as nature designed it should; a set of nerves that will keep you up to the standard of physical and mental energy. I will increase your nervous force and capacity for mental labor, making your daily work a pleasure. You will sleep as a man ought to sleep. You will start the day as a mental worker must who would get the best of which his brain is capable. I can promise you all of this because it is common-sense, rational and just as logical as that study improves the intellect.

ALOIS P. SWOBODA
Originator and Sole Instructor

My system is taught by mail only and with perfect success, requires no apparatus whatever, and but a few minutes' time in your own room just before retiring.

By this condensed system more exercise and benefit can be obtained in ten minutes than by any other in two hours, and it is the only one which does not overtax the heart. It is the only natural, easy and speedy method for obtaining perfect health, physical development and elasticity of mind and body. Pupils are both sexes, ranging in age from fifteen to eighty-six, and all recommend the system. Since no two people are in the same physical condition, individual instructions are given in each case.

Write at once, mentioning this magazine, for full information and convincing endorsements from many of America's leading citizens.

HUGH R. LOUDON,

CENTURY BLDG., ST. LOUIS, MO.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 31, 1900.

Mr. Alois P. Swoboda, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir:—It is a pleasure to testify to the merits and the benefits to be derived from your system of physiological exercise. First, and of most importance, it has cured me completely of dyspepsia and constipation, both chronic and of long standing, and in the treatment of which I had expended large sums without obtaining relief. The effect of your system was immediate and almost beyond belief. My appetite increased enormously, and there was no difficulty in digesting and assimilating the food consumed.

Today my health is perfect. I have always appreciated the benefits to be derived from proper exercise, and in pursuit of health, tried rowing and gymnastic work for several years, also various potent exercises, but never received anything like the benefit or development that has resulted from three months' application to your system. In this short time I have increased my chest expansion four inches and all my muscles in proportion. In two months I was able to tear a full pack of playing cards into halves, and the halves into quarters, showing ability to apply my strength, which is a quality to be desired and one that cannot be measured with a tape. It is no exaggeration to say that my capacity for both physical and mental exertion is increasing daily, and the feeling resulting from a state of perfect health aids me in business and is something money could not replace. To anyone feeling the need of regular exercise, easily taken, I cannot commend your system too highly. Wishing you deserved success, I am, Yours very sincerely, H. R. Loudon.

ALOIS P. SWOBODA, 393 Western Book Bldg., CHICAGO.

What DETECTIVES say about THAT MAINWARING AFFAIR

"One of the best detective stories I have ever read."

R. J. LINDEN,
Ex-Chief of Police, Philadelphia.

By A.

MAYNARD BARBOUR

Illustrated

$1.50

"The thing that impressed me most was the author's knowledge of detective work."

CHAS. A. FARIS,
American Detective Bureau.

J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia

Cure for the Blues !

Prize Story Gripsack

For 25 cents we will mail the eight numbers of THE BLACK CAT containing the 17 capital prize stories here named, together with 23 others that helped win the title, "The story-telling hit of the age." Money cannot buy more fascinating stories.

The Shortstory Publishing Company, Boston, Mass.

Through the Forbidden Gates.	$200	Prize
Carroll Carrington.
The Quarantined Bridegroom.	$150	"
Edna Kenton.
The Gaikwar's Sword.	$300	"
H. S. Canfield.
The Dancing Goddess.	$100	"
W. G. Kelly.
The Train Hunt at Loidos.	$200	"
E. C. Preston.
The Diamond Drill and Mary.	$150	"
H. J. W. Dam.
A Sister to the Borgias.	$125	"
Joanna E. Wood.
The Levitation of Jacob.	$200	"
Clifford Howard.
"Missing."	$100	"
Mary Boardman Sheldon.
The French Doll's Dowry.	$100	"
Florence G. Tuttle.
The Music of Money.	$100	"
Newton Newkirk.
The Haunted Cap.	$200	"
George W. Kelley.
Dr. Goldman.	$100	"
Don Mark Lemon.
The Vase of the Mikado.	$150	"
A. E. B. Lane.
Hans Kremler's Anniversary.	$300	"
Elisabeth F. Dye.
When Time Turned.	$125	"
Ethel Watts Mumford.
Margaret Kelly's Wake.	$500	"
S. C. Brean.

HOW TO DO BUSINESS

as business is done in great commercial centers.

Bookkeeping, penmanship, shorthand and typewriting are merely aids in doing business. We teach these and more. Special course in Agriculture.

FREE. To further introduce our courses we are offering King's Commercial Compendium, retail price $1.00, containing business forms and self-instructions in penmanship absolutely free to new students. Send for Handbook.

The Home Correspondence School, Springfield, Mass.

EASY TO LEARN

SHORT STORY WRITERS

make princely incomes. Never was the demand for this class of writers so great as now. Have you ordinary ability? Then you can become a successful short story writer by taking our mail course. Have you a M.S. that has been rejected? Send it to us for criticism and revision, and if it contains a good plot we can make it saleable. MSS. typewritten and sold on commission. Easy terms. Authors' Literary Ass'n, P. O. Box 444, Philadelphia, Pa.

Writers

of short stories and special assignments make big money. J.L. Rider Haggard charges $10.00 for a single short story. Can you write? Is your, if necessary

ful. We can help you. Send for Descriptive Booklet. It's Free. Send to-day—now.

Ann Arbor Correspondence College, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Be a Writer

Have you talent? Earn money writing Prize Stories and articles. Manuscripts prepared for publication. Send stamp for our booklet, "WHAT WRITERS NEED."

WRITERS' AID ASSOCIATION, 150 D Nassau St., N. Y.

WRITERS materially aided. MRS. PLACID, MSS. REVISED. Conducted by FRANK LEE FARNELL, experienced editor and literary expert. Highest references. Send for Leaflet E. UNITED LITERARY PRESS, 187 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Stories Novels
Books
Poems

Manuscripts of every description promptly and correctly typewritten. National Manuscript Typewriting Co., 504 Townsend Bldg., New York City.

Addresses Lectures
Debates Sermons

AUTHORS

Have your MSS. been repeatedly rejected? Something's wrong. We make it our business to tell you wherein the M.S. is faulty, and sell on commission. Costs you nothing to have us examine your work.

Address MSS. Dept.

SCROLL PUB. CO.

343 5th Ave.,

Chicago.

PAGE-DAVIS SCHOOL OF ADVERTISING

LEARN TO WRITE ADVERTISEMENTS

Our Graduates Are Earning Big Salaries as Advertisement Writers—They had no similar experience before enrolling with us. They are successful. What others are doing you certainly can do. For five years large concerns have been looking to us for graduates capable of earning $25 to $100 a week. Taught thoroughly by mail. Provisions free on request. This is the "original school you hear so much about."

PAGE-DAVIS CO., SUITE 25, 187 ADAMS ST., CHICAGO.

LEARN TO WRITE ADS

HIGHER SALARY

I. C. S. Textbooks, specially written for busy people, make it easy for men and women at work to learn By Mail. Courses in Engineering, Architecture, Ornamental Drawing, Stenography, German, Spanish, French, etc. Circular Free. International Correspondence Schools, Box 1192, Scranton, Pa.

HOME STUDY FOR BUSINESS

We teach Bookkeeping, Office Work, Business Forms, Penmanship, Commercial Law, Shorthand, Letter Writing, English and Civil Service courses thoroughly by MAIL at your own HOME or at our College. We give a useful, money-making Education. Salaries obtained by our students. 45 YEARS' SUCCESS. National reputation. It will pay you. Try It. Catalog free. Trial lesson free. BRYANT & STRATTON, 322 College Bldg., Buffalo, N.Y.

JOURNALISM

Practical, profitable newspaper work, writing short stories, magazine articles, etc.

TAUGHT BY MAIL

by our successful system in personal charge of Mr. Henry Litchfield West, formerly managing editor of the Washington Post. Successful students everywhere. Write for illustrated booklet on Journalism. NATIONAL CORRESPONDENCE INSTITUTE, 20-48 Second National Bank Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Dancing School at Home

Thousands of pupils now dancing. Up-ton's hints and correct instruction make it easy to learn. Waltz, Schottische, Hip Waltz, Two Step, Five-Step Schottische. Any one of the above dances with Charts and Music mailed for 25c. or all complete for 50c. HENRY D. UPTON, Master of Dancing, "Home of the Seven Gables," Salem, Mass.

Geo. Andrew Lewis.

DO YOU STAMMER

Write for our new 200-page book, The Origin and Treatment of Stammering, and Sovereign, containing 37 illustrations and half-tone engravings interesting to every stammerer. Send free to any reader of The Black Cat for 6 cts. in stamps to cover postage. The Lewis School for Stammerers, 60 Adelaide St., Detroit, Mich. U. S. A.

LEARN PROOFREADING.

If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and untroubled profession paying $15 to $25 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.

HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

AUTHORS

Prompt examination given BOOK MSS. When appropriate for sale or better findings, we list and publish.

EASTERN PUBLISHING CO., Beeley Square, Boston, Mass.

A Non-Gushing, Dividend Paying Oil Proposition

now confronts the conservative investor who wishes to be connected with an oil property, where after twelve hours' ride from Boston he can be on the ground, in Canada, where the oil is produced.

There is no outlet for Texas oil at present. It is a glut on the market at any price. "As matters are now, the daily shipments do not amount to the capacity of the smallest gusher." (Beaumont Correspondent in the New York Evening Post.)

The Imperial Oil Company at Sarnia, Ont., has agreed to take all the oil produced by the Boston-Canada Oil Co., at the market price, now $1.68 per barrel. This gives us an immediate home market for all the oil we can produce.

"It costs $10,000 to drill a test well in Texas." (Beaumont Correspondent New York Tribune.)

In Canada we can drill twenty wells for $10,000, and they will all be paying, conservative producers for years. The Boston-Canada Oil Company owns in fee simple an oil property in Lambton County, Ontario, with power house, boiler and engine. Drilling rigs are on the grounds, with two wells already down and producing high-grade oil. Other wells will be producing oil within a month.

WE WANT 200 WELLS WITHIN A YEAR.

We have an immediate home market. We save a tariff of $2 a barrel. Oil is simply liquid money in Canada, therefore, we herewith give NOTICE!

All stockholders of record November 1st, 1901, will participate in the FIRST DIVIDEND, PAYABLE DECEMBER 1st, 1901.

Become a shareholder—a part owner—in an oil company that has oil to sell and a place to sell it as fast as produced.

To put down more wells on the extensive properties, owned and leased in Kent and Lambton Counties, stock is now offered in lots of not less than 100 and up to 10,000 shares before it is advanced in price, at

5 Cents a Share

Forever Paid and Never Assessable.

A steady, permanent, profitable investment as good as a Government bond.

BOSTON-CANADA OIL CO.

Colonial Building, 100 Boylston St., Boston, Mass.

Make all checks, etc., payable to W. D. COCHRANE, Treas.

Subscribe for the OIL AND MINING REVIEW, $1.00 a year.

505 Colonial Building, 100 Boylston St., Boston, Mass.

The Black Cat

A Monthly Magazine of Original Short Stories.

Copyright, 1901, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

No. 73.

OCTOBER, 1901.

5 cents a copy.
50 cents a year.

Entered at the Post-Office at Boston, Mass., as second-class matter.

THE BLACK CAT is devoted exclusively to original, unusual, fascinating stories—every number is complete in itself. It publishes no serials, translations, borrowings, or stealings. It pays nothing for the name or reputation of a writer, but the highest price on record for Stories that are Stories, and it pays not according to length, but according to strength. To receive attention, manuscripts must be sent unrolled, fully prepaid, and accompanied by addressed and stamped envelope for return. All MSS. are received and returned at their writers' risk.

CAUTION.—The entire contents of THE BLACK CAT are protected by copyright, and publishers everywhere are cautioned against reproducing any of the stories, either wholly or in part.

The Yellow Light.*

BY HENRY LYLE.*

UT of the unknown into prominence Mrs. Badger had come at one leap; from whence or what were questions asked by New York's most exclusive few. For others it was sufficient that she occupied the Griswold mansion on the Avenue, kept up the establishment in regal style, entertained lavishly and was seen in all those places where money could take her and many even whose doors were dark to money merely. About all that was certain was that a family whose fortunes were notoriously on the ebb had stood sponsors for Mrs. Badger when she stormed the portals of that Society which arrogates to itself the capital S.

Mrs. Badger's advent had been coincident with the equally sudden announcement of Mr. Griswold's departure for Europe. Amos Griswold was pre-eminently a man of business, and Messrs. Prosé & Prosé, his attorneys, had been astonished one morning by receiving word that he had sailed for Europe the previous afternoon, leaving a book of signed checks in Mrs. Badger's hands, which were to be honored when presented, and that her orders were to be received as though given by him, and a monthly account of his affairs rendered to her.

* Copyright, 1901, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

So for several months Prosé & Prosé had watched Mrs. Badger's social career with interest. When the elder member of the firm hinted to his son a doubt of Mrs. Badger's ability to handle the Griswold millions carefully, the younger reminded him that a legal adviser's province was restricted, and that "Old" Griswold's written orders had been explicit.

Still the elder Prosé continued to give Mrs. Badger and the Griswold estate more than a fair share of his thoughts during business hours, and from every point of view the matter looked unsatisfactory, especially the strange oversight of a methodical man of business in setting no limit on the amount Mrs. Badger might draw. Finally he came to devote much time outside of business hours to Mrs. Badger and her personality. He deserted his club and haunted places where the lady of his thoughts was to be seen. One night his sensibilities received a rude shock when Mrs. Badger coolly cut him as she passed from her carriage to the theatre. When he opened his eyes the next morning, his first thought was of Mrs. Badger. He sat up in bed and looked in the glass.

"Well, well!" he growled to himself, "there's no fool like an old — Never mind, I'm over it, and now I'll find out about that woman — or know the reason why!"

This purpose became the very essence of his life, but yielded no results. No scandal touched Mrs. Badger in her present way of life. No clue to her past could he obtain. He was almost in despair when the following advertisement caught his eye:

WANTED. — Private secretary; young man of good address and thorough knowledge of social usages. Must be qualified to take entire charge of lady's correspondence. Address L.L.B., Herald uptown.

Mr. Prosé the elder studied the advertisement, and thought. "The same," he muttered. "L. L. B. — I verily believe it's the Badger!"

He looked up angrily as he perceived that his mutterings had been heard by his junior clerk, who stood in a respectful attitude holding a bundle of papers.

"Ha! Robinson," he exclaimed in answer to the clerk's question, "You're the very man — good address, knowledge of social usages and all that — you'll do! If you get to the bottom of this business I'll see that you don't lose anything by it!"

114-21
114

Ford Robinson stood staring. The description fitted him so well that he was too polite not to wait for an explanation.

"Oh!" said Mr. Prosé, "I forgot — you don't know about it." Whereupon he handed the young man the printed slip.

"Mrs. Badger's initials?" inquired the clerk, tentatively.

"Good!" exclaimed the lawyer. "If that proves to be the case, would you like to take the place — temporarily?"

Robinson's heart beat rapidly. Would he like it? Would he like to live under the same roof and in daily communication with the woman whom he had worshipped from afar since first he saw her? It took his breath away.

"Why — why — certainly, sir, if you wish it," he stammered.

"I do wish it," replied Prosé, "if it really is Mrs. Badger. I desire to find out all that can be discovered about her, and everything that goes on in Griswold's house."

Robinson hesitated. "I would hardly like to play the spy — especially on a lady, and so fine a lady as —"

"Oh, I see! Another fool who hopes to find a paradise in that woman's society! Why, she wouldn't look at you if her horses were walking on you! Excuse me, Robinson, but — well, never mind; write first and find out if it is Mrs. Badger. If it is — go there and secure the place. You can do it. If she's all right, there's no harm done. If she isn't — and I believe she's played some smart trick on Griswold to get him to go to Europe and leave her a free hand — then, we'll uncover her game. You'll be disillusioned, in any event," he added with a touch of spite.

He gazed at the young man, as if mentally comparing him with Mrs. Badger's other conquests, and thereupon asked:

"You've seen Mr. Griswold in the office here?"

Robinson shook his head. "He never came in while I was here."

The advertisement was answered, and in due course a reply was received requesting Robinson to call on Mrs. Badger with his references.

His employer was delighted, furnished Robinson with excellent letters from discreet friends, and the young clerk was admitted to the Griswold mansion and Mrs. Badger's presence, after she had dismissed another aspirant for the place. This respite gave Robinson a chance to steady his fluttering heart and nerves, and study his charmer. She was a beautifully formed woman, above the average height, who held her head like one accustomed to command. Her features were fine and regular, though the lower lip was a trifle full, and her complexion the pink and white developed by extreme care and a masseur's attention. Robinson decided as he gazed that old Prosé was mistaken in his suspicions.

His reverie was interrupted by Mrs. Badger, who, dismissing the man with whom she had been talking, turned sharply to Robinson. As their eyes met he felt as though a veil had been withdrawn suddenly from before his vision. Instinctively his attitude changed from one of admiration to one of defence. He was on his guard—waiting to parry a thrust. Mrs. Badger's character was mirrored in her eyes—all other features failed as indices. To a man whose experience in life, on a newspaper and in a lawyer's office, had given him more than one searching view into criminal courts and the prison pen, that peculiar glitter did not mean position—it was not the steeliness resulting from birth and breeding, not the calmness of erudition. Robinson had seen it often in those who prey on society, accompanying that tension of nerve that results from playing a game in which all the faculties are alert, in which even the rewards of success are not commensurate with the penalties of failure.

The glance lasted but for a moment, and then Mrs. Badger said: "You are—ah—Mr.—? Ah, yes, Robinson—thank you."

She took his credentials and looked them over rather carelessly. The third she read carefully, and then critically surveyed the young man. He was prepared for the sharp query:

"Did you take entire charge of Mrs. Loren's correspondence?"

Robinson bowed. "And also of her establishment," he said.

Mrs. Badger looked at him keenly. "I prefer to manage my own establishment. All you will have to do here is to look after my correspondence, none of which is of a business nature. The question of salary remains to be settled."

Robinson did not permit a trace of his more than natural satisfaction to show when he answered: "I understand then, Mrs. Badger, that I am to take the position?"

She nodded and Robinson named a salary to which no objection could be made. Mrs. Badger rang a bell and ordered the butler to show Mr. Robinson the room he was to occupy.

When his baggage had come, and he was lounging in a large Turkish rocker, before a crackling hickory fire, smoking a cigarette, he felt himself a villain of deepest dye to doubt that Mrs. Badger could be other than his fancy had first painted her — so mollifying to man is a sense of personal comfort. He was aroused by the soft-footed butler's cough and announcement:

"If you please, sir, Mrs. Badger would like to have you come to her rooms. Hexcuse me, sir, will you dress for dinner, sir?"

Robinson was somewhat startled. He had not expected to dine with his employer — not the first evening, at any rate.

He recovered his self-possession. "Oh, yes, certainly. You may help me a bit, if you will — er — what do they call you?"

"Jenkins, sir."

"Well, Jenkins, I'm ready," and he slipped a bill into the man's hand.

"Thankee, sir. We — er — the 'elp will be werry glad to see a gentleman about the 'ouse, sir."

He closed the door which he had been holding open, led the way through a long passage to an entrance at the end which he opened to admit Robinson, and then shut it quickly, remaining outside.

The small apartment which Robinson had entered was the ante-room of a suite entirely separate from the rest of the house. For a moment he stood, dazzled. The room was fitted entirely in deep yellow, and the yellow shades of the electric lights heightened the effect. For a moment he was unpleasantly impressed, though he could not have described his sensation. He started when a man in yellow livery approached, so strange was the man's appearance — so incongruous seemed the small stature and rounded shoulders with the massive head and the face above the yellow coat. The forehead was broad and the nose aquiline, but these signs of intellectual strength were offset by dull and lack-lustre eyes, as though a fool looked upon the world from behind a wise man's mask. And yet the manners of a gentleman seemed to lurk beneath an exaggerated servility that irritated Robinson unreasonably. But the dull eye gave no sign, and the secretary followed his peculiar guide with the thought that constant service must have driven the poor pigmy into mere automatism.

The drawing-room into which he was shown was, like that which he had just left, furnished entirely in yellow. Mrs. Badger, dressed in yellow satin, stood leaning lightly on the mantel, and watched Robinson keenly as he entered.

"I always dine in my own apartments, Mr. Robinson," she said, "and as you will have to be here much of your time it will be of advantage if you dine and lunch with me. Please be seated."

Then she turned to the quiet figure in the doorway: "James, have dinner served at once."

Robinson, somehow, felt relieved at the obsequious manner in which the command was received. He was not surprised to find the dining room the counterpart, in its color scheme, of those through which he had passed. The meal was a silent one, conversation being confined to guarded inquiries from Mrs. Badger concerning Robinson's duties in the Loren household. He saw no attendant but the servile little man in yellow. Though the lady regarded him furtively with an expectant look, Robinson determined not to gratify this expectation by any allusion to the peculiar furnishings of the suite. But when coffee had been served, Mrs. Badger said:

"I am glad to see, Mr. Robinson, that you are discreet."

Robinson raised his eyebrows in polite inquiry.

"The color of my rooms must have surprised you?" she said, looking at him sharply. Again the peculiar glint in her eyes put the young man on guard.

"I noticed it, of course, but supposed it expressed some taste or fancy of your own. I believe it was Charles IX. of France who, inheriting certain exquisite tastes from his Florentine mother, first adopted monochrome decoration of apartments?" and Robinson looked at his employer as if for concurrence.

"Was it? Well, then, one need not wonder if a modern woman of that race, from which I spring on my mother's side, exaggerate that unhappy monarch's artistic tendencies. I am pleased that you are acquainted with French history."

Robinson disclaimed being a student of French history in particular, and Mrs. Badger, acting as though annoyed, rose from the table.

"There will be nothing this evening, Mr. Robinson. If I need your services any time in the evening, I will tell you of it when we transact our morning business. Otherwise, you are free to make such disposition of your time as you may wish. James, show Mr. Robinson out."

Robinson bowed, but Mrs. Badger, looking past him, kept her eyes on the little yellow man, who moved toward the door and stood with bowed head, holding back the portières. When they reached the ante-room he stopped suddenly, bowed his deferential, automatic bow, and, pointing to the outer door, returned toward the dining-room.

The new secretary's dreams that night were of yellow rooms, beautiful women and Florentine tragedies, and though in the bright sunshine of the morrow his thoughts returned to his earlier impressions of his charming patroness, he resolved not to be lulled into forgetfulness of his mission. At ten o'clock he was busy in Mrs. Badger's library, working steadily till James called him to luncheon, but gaining no new insight into the mysteries of her ménage. Luncheon was served at one o'clock, and everything was as it had been on the previous evening, except that, instead of artificial light, daylight illumined the dining-room, admitted through window-panes of deep yellow glass. Mrs. Badger wore a morning gown of yellow cloth, and James, as before, kept his eyes constantly upon her, but seemed not to anticipate her slightest want. So servile, so attentive, he yet appeared unable to apprehend, until her sharp, clear commands came, the simple and ordinary requirements of the table service, which, to an automaton of years of training, one would suppose to be second nature. Robinson's attention involuntarily centred on the strangeness of this servant and this mistress. Why should she attach to herself such a creature, when the perfect Jenkins might perform the required duties so much better, without a word of command?

James had just served the salad when they were startled by a loud crash, and a base-ball came through the window, carrying with it a large portion of the glass and admitting a stream of sunlight which fell across the table. Robinson started up, but stopped abruptly at a loud exclamation.

"Stop! Who dares break my — Ah — h —!"

It was James who had spoken, and the sentence ended in a long-drawn sigh, like that of one disturbed in his sleep. Mrs. Badger had leaped lightly upon a chair and drawn a yellow shade over the broken window just as the man subsided in the middle of his outbreak. Then she turned upon him quickly:

"James, what do you mean by such unseemly conduct?"

The answer came in the man's habitual mechanical manner:

"Madam will pardon me — I really do not know how I came to do so. It shall never occur again."

"See that it does not — my head will not stand such startling things. Now you may continue the service."

Robinson was conscious that Mrs. Badger was watching narrowly the effect of this peculiar episode. He forced himself to eat and seem at ease, but his mind was on the startling change in James when the sunlight fell upon his face. He threw down the napkin he carried, his dull eyes flashed ominously, his obsequious monotone gave place to a voice vibrant and strong. Only for an instant while the sun shone — then an automaton again.

The young secretary said carelessly: "Ball-playing in the streets is a nuisance. The law against it should be strictly enforced."

"Yes. Did you ever notice anything quite so peculiar as the change in James?"

The question was very innocent or very deep. It must be the latter, Robinson thought, to bring forward so boldly the one strange feature of the occurrence, in the man's very presence. He answered slowly:

"Yes. I have seen one or two similarly strange things. I remember one case where a man was suddenly withdrawn from under hypnotic influence —"

"Oh, pshaw! I'm not speaking of that. If we were to believe Max Nordau, everybody — except himself — is acting under suggestion, and not with free will. I don't mean such improbable things. I had in mind cases of mental disease — megalomania, I believe the alienists call it — where the subject suddenly gets an idea of personal grandeur. A friend of mine used to have a delusion seize him, whenever he heard a certain waltz played, that he was an angel sent to punish the world. Nothing but that one piece of music ever brought on the delirium."

Robinson again sought to parallel the story with a case of hypnotic suggestion, but his mistress impatiently gave the signal that luncheon was finished, thus sending him back to his work.

In his room that evening, he gazed long and thoughtfully at the wood fire and then sent for Jenkins and set him some light tasks.

"Jenkins," he said, "I suppose you find a change since Mr. Griswold went abroad."

"Hi never seen Mr. Griswold, sir. Hi came 'ere hafter Mrs. Badger took the 'ouse, sir."

"Ah. And how do the others like the change?"

"The 'elp sir? None of 'em was 'ere, sir. They all kem when Hi did, sir."

Again Robinson said "Ah!" But he continued, "I suppose James is an old servant of Mrs. Badger's, isn't he? Mrs. Badger's own butler, I mean."

"Hi don't know, sir — 'e never talks to hus, and none o' the 'elp knows 'im, sir. Beggin' your pardon, sir, we hall thinks 'e's a bit hoff 'ere, sir," and Jenkins touched his forehead.

"Too bad," said Robinson, as the servant was leaving the room. He relighted his pipe and stared at the fire, going over in his mind what he had just heard and what he had previously seen. His pipe went out and he sat suddenly upright.

"Yellow is certainly not the most becoming color to her — I don't believe she surrounds herself with it merely to keep pure daylight off that old monkey. I feel sure he knows something about this woman — if I could only get it out of him!"

There came a discreet knock at the door, and Jenkins reëntered.

"Hif you please, sir, Mrs. Badger 'as changed 'er plans for the hevenin', sir. She's going to the the-atre with the Wrens, sir, and will you please report to 'er at ten to-morrow morning, sir."

"Thank you, Jenkins. Tell me when she has gone, please."

"Very well, sir. Hi will, sir."

The next half-hour was a trying one for Robinson. He walked the room restlessly, muttering imprecations upon all women. Had the elder Prosé at that moment asked his opinion of Mrs. Badger he would have said that she was an adventuress playing a deep game, but if pressed for a reason could have offered only a tissue of surmises.

When at length the butler had brought him the expected word and gone downstairs, he walked quietly and quickly to Mrs. Badger's suite and tried the door, which, somewhat to his surprise, opened readily. In the ante-room, his strange, expressionless eyes fixed upon the doorway, sat the man he sought. He only stared when Robinson entered, and moved but slightly when spoken to sharply. The young man left him and hurriedly surveyed the other rooms, but found nothing which he had not before mentally noted. Then he returned and shook the strange servant roughly by the shoulder. "James! Attend to what I have to say! How long have you been with Mrs. Badger?"

There was no answer to this question, varied and repeated many times. The miserable wretch sat blankly staring, seeming utterly to fail to comprehend. The close apartment was heavy with Mrs. Badger's favorite perfume. The yellow glare beat down upon them, and Robinson, shaken by the oppression of the situation and the excitement of his adventure, gasped:

"Lord! Come out of this — come where I can breathe!"

Seizing James by the arms, he half dragged, half carried him into the brightly lighted hall.

Instantly the man began to struggle. "Hands off!" he cried sharply in a commanding tone. "How dare you touch me?"

In astonishment Ford Robinson thrust the man away from him. He saw that a startling change had again come over the automaton. The eyes flashed, the hands were clenched, the voice was full of rage: "Who are you, sir? What the devil do you mean by laying hands on me in my own house?"

Robinson looked at him sorrowfully. "Now, James, be sensible. Come, like a good fellow —"

"James! Don't you James me, you young whipper-snapper. Don't you dare 'good-fellow' me, sir. I'll teach you —" Then, for the first time, he caught sight of his yellow clothes. "Why — who — what —" he gasped. "Did you put these things on me?"

Robinson shook his head and held up a warning hand.

"Hush! You'll alarm the servants, and Mrs. Badger will —"

"Mrs. Badger!" almost screamed the man. "Oh, that woman! I'll have her out of this house! And you, you puppy, what are you doing here?"

Robinson, of course, had always read of the policy of soothing maniacs, and replied in a conciliatory manner, "I didn't know it was your house, sir. I thought it was Mr. Griswold's."

"Oh, you did know it, did you? You merely thought you could come and make a monkey of Amos Griswold in his —"

"Amos Griswold!" broke in Robinson. "Why, you can't be Amos Griswold, — he's —"

"Can't, hey? Well, I am, and I'll soon show you that I'm master here!"

Robinson thought rapidly, and his thoughts were accelerated by the sound of a footstep in the hall below. Probably the old man was a harmless lunatic, but if he were not — if there was in reality a game on foot as deep as he suspected — the player must be securely trapped, and this strange creature must assist, but there was no time for explanations now. Clapping a hand over the old man's mouth, Robinson picked him up and carried him bodily back into the yellow suite, closing the door behind them. He did not pause till he had set the pigmy down at the farther end of the drawing room, that the sound of the explosion of wrath he expected might not penetrate to the main portion of the house.

To his amazement the man stood motionless as before. The personality that had so suddenly flashed out — a choleric and pompous old gentleman — had vanished as mysteriously as it had come, and in its place was the staring, senseless James, whom he was obliged to carry in his arms back to the post of mute vigil in the ante-room.

Fifteen minutes later, having left word with Jenkins that he was obliged to take the air on account of a raging headache, Ford Robinson was in excited conversation with his real employer, the elder Prosé, in a house near Fiftieth Street.

"Well, Robinson — any news?"

"Yes, sir, very important, I think. What sort of a man is Mr. Griswold in appearance?"

"Small, with sloping shoulders, but a fine head, with broad, intelligent forehead, a clean-cut mouth, gray side whiskers. Holds his head like a drill sergeant. What of it?"

Robinson rapidly told all that had happened in the Griswold mansion. Prosé sat with finger-tips together, listened and nodded.

"It must be the yellow color," he said at length. "I've read of such a thing, but never believed it possible. You get right back now, before she returns from the theatre. I'll be on hand in the morning, with a detective. Cured of your love for that she-devil, aren't you?" he could not forbear adding.

The clock had struck ten the following morning, and Jenkins had but just informed Robinson that Mrs. Badger was ready to begin the morning's work when he returned to announce a caller for the private secretary, and ushered in Prosé.

Robinson hesitated but for a moment. "Come with me," he whispered. "You will see the servant. If it isn't Mr. Griswold, you can probably withdraw without attracting Mrs. Badger's attention. If it is—we can draw the lioness's teeth at once. Your plain-clothes man?"

"Is at the door below."

As the two men entered the door of the yellow suite, and Prosé caught sight of the liveried automaton standing with head bowed to receive Robinson, he smothered a sharp exclamation, and, pressing the young man's arm, gave a nod of intelligence. The little yellow man turned and held back the portière for Robinson to pass, and then walked immediately behind him, coming into violent contact with Prosé, whom he evidently did not see, and entirely disregarded. The lawyer understood, however, and fell in behind. As the portière dropped over the last doorway, he paused as he heard Mrs. Badger's cold "Good morning, Mr. Robinson."

Then he lifted the curtain and passed through. Mrs. Badger spasmodically grasped the table's edge. She was undoubtedly startled, but under admirable control. With all the air of well-bred surprise she could put into it, her tone was sharp and cold as she said, darting a rapid glance at Robinson:

"I should prefer to be informed when I am to expect your calls, Mr. Prosé. Please wait in the library. James! Show the gentleman to the main hall."

The old lawyer wavered a moment under her steady gaze and authoritative air.

"You will excuse me, madam—there has been a great crime committed." Then, his indignation returning, he almost shouted, "What are you doing with Mr. Griswold? What magic do you employ that I find one of the shrewdest financiers in New York dressed up like a monkey, taking orders from you? Out with it!"

"Sir! You forget yourself. Mr. Robinson, if you are responsible for this madman's presence in my apartments, take him out before I call for help."

This ill-timed outbreak fortunately gave the usually cool lawyer an opportunity to collect himself. Uninvited he took a seat and said:

"Not so fast, madam. I am sitting in at this game now, and I hold the winning cards."

Mrs. Badger paled perceptibly — she well knew the difference between the danger to be feared from an angry person and that from one cool and collected.

Placing his finger-tips together in his favorite attitude, Prosé continued:

"I am here to rescue Mr. Griswold, and to punish those guilty of this strange crime. How you got Mr. Griswold under your influence and how you keep him disguised as a servant are questions that—"

A sharp dry laugh from Mrs. Badger interrupted him.

"My dear sir," she said, smiling, "your professional zeal for a client shall excuse your gross breach of social etiquette. I see now what you mean. It is clearly a case of mistaken identity, and one quite easy to prove. James! Tell Mr. Prosé how you came into my service."

The old automaton, stepping toward the person at whom his mistress's finger pointed, said in his monotonous voice:

"If you please, sir, I came to Mrs. Badger while she was in London. Came direct from Lady Surrey, sir."

Prosé watched him closely, and as he finished said sharply:

"Don't you know me, Mr. Griswold?"

The only answer was a shake of the head.

"There! Now, James, show Mr. Prosé to the main hall. If he has any business with me I will attend to it in the library," and Mrs. Badger resumed her seat, as though the interview were at an end.

Ford Robinson, during this exciting scene, had been putting himself between the group and the nearest window.

Prosé now turned to him: "Mr. Robinson, may I trouble you to open that window wide? This pecu —"

The woman was on her feet again in an instant, and broke in:

"Mr. Robinson is under my orders. Mr. Prosé, I ask you again to retire!"

"Go ahead, Robinson," exclaimed the lawyer. "Be quick!"

In a moment the window was wide open, admitting a flood of pale winter sunlight, and Prosé pushed the little man in yellow forward into its full glare. A tremor ran through the man, he drew a deep breath, and then, drawing himself to a height not devoid of dignity exclaimed:

"What is going on here? What is the meaning of all this yellow flummery? Hah! Prosé! Explain, sir!"

For a moment the three principal actors stood facing each other. Then the woman — whatever her name was — perched on the edge of the table by which she had stood, swung her feet and smiled at Lawyer Prosé as she said:

"Well, the game is up, and you did have the cards — but I had a good run with the old man's money first!"

The Spectrum Page.*

BY RICHARD BARKER SHELTON.

PROBABLY a third of the people of the civilized world know of the existence of the great glass company, one of the wealthiest of corporations, and at least a third more have seen in shop windows in all parts of the globe glassware of every description, clear as crystal or most perfectly colored, and annealed by a wonderful process, which renders it so tough that an ordinary blow has no effect upon it.

Some time, when you have purchased a hock-glass of perfect tint, tumblers marvellously wrought, or even a humble lamp-chimney—a triumph of perfection in its way—and when you are wondering at the process which gives you these articles at a figure ridiculously small, turn them about and you will find somewhere on them a small stamp like this:

It is the Allglass Company which has revolutionized the art, and which came into existence through a strange chance.

For years glassware had been John Temple's hobby. His house was filled with the choicest gleanings of many lands. His uncle, whose name he bore, had left him enough of a fortune to devote his time to such things, and he followed his bent with a zeal sufficiently below mania to be termed genuine enthusiasm. During his days of collecting, two points were brought forcibly to his attention. He could procure glasses of the most beautiful tints, but at a price which made them beyond the reach of people in ordinary circumstances. Again, when he had procured a treasure, it must be kept in a case or handled with care lest some chance slip might prove its destruction.

* Copyright, 1901, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

To overcome these two things — to make a glass of perfect coloring and at the same time one which would be tough enough to be serviceable — Temple bent all his energies. That it could be done he was positive, but ten good years of his life, spent for the most part in an evil-smelling laboratory, netted but scant results. He had, however, made some advancement, and his determination to accomplish his end was no whit lessened.

One afternoon in March, after weeks of disheartening work, he had discovered a process by which perfect amber tints could be obtained at a nominal sum. It was three o'clock when he finished work and locked the laboratory. It was Temple's custom after hours of concentration to walk down town, pausing now and then to peer into shop windows, that the trifling interest he found there might relieve the strain of the preceding hours.

It was a windy afternoon and heavy clouds hung the sky. He walked briskly, for the air was chilly, and it was not until he was well down town that he paused before the windows of a second-hand bookshop. Within was a miscellaneous collection of books in a more or less battered condition — volumes of encyclopædias, Dickens, Thackeray, and textbooks — and, strewn about, paper-covered novels with suggestive titles and more suggestive subtitles. In the centre of the window was a huge family Bible, opened, the text of Matthew on the right-hand page, and on the left a blank page of the "Family Record."

As he stood there, the sun broke through the clouds. A moment later he was staring through the window with wondering eyes. On the page of the "Family Record," indistinct at the beginning, but growing clearer as he read down the page, were these words, written in a cramped but painstaking hand:

— this method of annealing gives a toughness which will resist any ordinary shock. It is, moreover, if practised on a large scale, cheaper than any known method, and for —

The remaining words were quite illegible. The rest of the page was seemingly a blank. He read and re-read the words and then rushed into the shop.

"Let me see the Bible in the window," he said to the clerk, with as much nonchalance as he could muster.

When the book was handed to him, Temple turned at once to the last page of the "Family Record." It was perfectly blank. He scanned the preceding pages and searched through those headed "Marriages" and "Births." He found merely a few conventional entries in faded ink. "Overwork," he thought to himself, as he went up the street, yet when he remembered every detail of the writing the explanation was far from satisfactory.

Two days later he stood again before the window. It was, perhaps, an hour later in the day than his previous visit. The sun shone from a cloudless sky. There were the battered books and the novels, and there was the Bible. It was with a queer thrill that he turned his eyes to the record page. He could scarcely believe his sight. In the same cramped hand he read these words:

— practised on a large scale, cheaper than any known method, and for years I sought to put this knowledge in the proper hands. I distrust D. C., which makes it —

The words began a little lower on the page than before. There was the same indistinctness at the beginning and end. Again Temple sought the shop and asked to see the Bible, and again the page was blank. He went outside and waited until the Bible was replaced in the window. The writing was the same, save that the words "impossible for me to" appeared at the end. He walked up the street and back again. When he stood once more before the window the sun had set. The page was again blank.

Far into the night Temple sat before his fire trying to solve the mystery. Had he called up, in his concentration, some psychic force? It would have seemed plausible, had he been possessed of any faith in such things. Yet, no better explanation presenting itself to his mind, he went to bed more disturbed than he had ever been in his life.

Many times after that he went to the bookshop. Always, when the sun shone, he read portions of that cramped handwriting. Sometimes it was the same text — sometimes new, and once words appeared on the margin of the first chapters of Matthew. He noticed that the position of the sun seemed to determine the portions he read and following up this clue he made an important discovery. The block next the bookshop was extended some four feet nearer the curb than its humbler neighbor, and this additional four feet had been utilized for an extra side to the show-window. The store next door was occupied by a drug firm and in the corner of the window nearest the book shop was a huge glass globe of red liquid. By careful measurements, Temple found that where the red light came filtering through the globe and fell on the record page of the Bible the handwriting became visible. He could have shouted with joy at his deductions. The rest was plain enough then.

Once more he asked to see the Bible and inquired its price.

"We ask $4.75," said the clerk, tentatively, "its age —"

Temple listened as patiently as possible, handed out a five-dollar note and had to be called back for his change as he hurried from the shop with his possession to hail a cab. On the way up town he stopped at a photographic supply store and purchased a ruby lantern. Then he sped anxiously homeward.

He took the Bible and lantern into a dark room and turned the red light upon the "Family Record." Instantly the pages and the margins through several chapters of Matthew teemed with that handwriting he knew so well. And this is, in part, what he read:

September 3, 1856.

My Dear Son: I write this at the house of David Clapp, who has advanced the capital for my experiments. I am sick—I fear with mortal illness. I write this that you may share with me the knowledge that my experiments have been a complete success and that by sharing it (the knowledge is yours and mine alone) you may have the upper hand of this man Clapp, whom I have good cause to believe has no intention of keeping faith with me. He has made several moves which have shown his low motives of greed. I can plainly see it is his one aim to find out the secret of the process and then to turn all the profits to his own uses. I shall write down all the data for you to-day on these pages and destroy all other papers. This to guard against Clapp, who, I believe, has no scruples so long as he can accomplish his end. I write this in a spectrum ink visible only in a red light. If you return from your journey abroad before I pass away, I can tell you in person. If not, I can only trust your quick wit to fathom my meaning in these phrases in the note I leave you, "Let your light be in the Bible—Matthew 1, xiii especially. See that it is read." I trust when you read them your mind will turn to the time when, a little boy in my laboratory, you were content for hours with the little piece of cardboard and the bit of red glass which made the letters come and go at your will. God keep you, my boy! May you reap the harvest of your father's life work.

Then followed a complete description of a process for making, coloring and annealing glass, which is jealously guarded by John Temple, treasurer of the Allglass Company. How the son failed to fathom the hidden meaning of his father's note—if he ever received it—is still a mystery, for to this day the man who discovered the process is unknown.

Major Bruerton's Wooing.*

BY FRANKLIN B. WILEY.

IT'S the most curious courtship you ever heard about."

Young Eliot Lerwick glanced up at the speaker. She was just settling into the car-seat ahead of his with the deft, sidewise movement that women make in swinging their skirts out of the way as they sit down. He caught a glimpse of the rose-tinted curve of an oval cheek and the white plumpness of a slender throat, from which she was pushing back her high jacket collar with a small, daintily gloved hand.

It was her voice rather than her remark that had attracted him, and he listened now with a pleased intentness to her clear, musical tones and inflections as she went on talking to her companion, a fresh-faced matron dressed in mourning:

"They met at the Mayhews' soon after he settled in Maxfield last April. But he didn't call for the longest time, although he was invited to, of course, and it was perfectly plain that he was deeply interested in her. They had nearly given up expecting him when, one evening about half-past nine o'clock, he called, and stayed until after eleven. Think of it! That was last June, and he has called at the same hour almost every evening since then. But he hasn't declared himself yet. Did you ever hear of anything so queer? Why Philippa Lerwick allows it to continue I cannot understand."

Eliot was startled by the sudden mention of his sister's name. It roused him with a sort of shock from the mood of restful satisfaction that had stolen over him while he was absent-mindedly contemplating the girl, and admiring the graceful poise of her head, the well-bred jauntiness with which her stylish hat rested

* Copyright, 1901, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

* The writer of this story received a cash prize of $100 in THE BLACK CAT story contest ending March 31, 1900.

on the lustrous coils of her dark hair, and the entrancing effect of a tiny curl that nestled just back of one delicate, shell-pink ear.

He felt a natural desire to hear more about this strange affair in which his sister seemed to be concerned. But the girl's next words were drowned by the strident tones of a train-horn as he hurried through the car calling out the names of the stations at which the train was to stop. A minute later the car began to move, and the next moment it rolled out of the huge, dusky interior of the train-shed into the failing light of the late September day.

Unable to make out amid the rumble and jar of the train what the girl was now saying, Eliot leaned comfortably back in his seat and looked idly out of the window, while the car swung with gathering speed across the switches, swaying from one side to the other with each rapid shift from track to track.

At first he could think only of what he had just overheard. It perplexed and annoyed him. Who could this newcomer in Maxfield be? Why did Philippa let him call so regularly at such an hour? She must have known that it would be talked about; so why had she not stopped it before people began to gossip?

But at this point he reflected that there was no use in puzzling over the matter when he would soon be at home and could ask his mother and sister themselves about it. He tingled with pleasure at the thought, and his memory went back with a leap to the chilly April day when he had last seen them, more than two years before. He remembered with what a forlorn sinking of the heart he had responded to the final good-bye they waved to him from the front veranda as the company marched past on its way to the station; and he recalled with a faint smile how hard it had been just then to carry himself with the martial dignity which he felt was demanded of him as a second lieutenant. He wondered if they had changed very much, and if they would be surprised at the alteration in himself. Of course they would not expect to find him exactly the same. But would they be prepared for the transformation that more than two years of campaigning in Porto Rico and Luzon had wrought in him? To be sure, he still showed to some extent the effects of the wound that had resulted in his being invalided and sent home on a six months' furlough. But the home-voyage had done wonders for him. He was almost as bronzed as before he had been shot, and he had regained more than half the weight he had lost while in the hospital. He might still be a trifle guant and sallow ; but he assured himself, with pardonable pride, that no one could help remarking the difference between the boyish subaltern of two years before and the veteran captain of volunteers who was now chafing with impatience to realize the bright anticipations of his home-coming.

The train had already left the long rows of city houses behind, and was speeding across the picturesque Riverdale Fens toward the open country. Some tall poplars and the high arch of a small stone bridge stood dark against the crimson west. Then the view was shut off by the wooded shoulder of a low hill, past which the train dashed with a resounding roar, and swept into the stretch of straight track that runs like a rule from Valleyford to Glenwood.

Eliot looked with delight at the familiar features of the home landscape. In the fading afterglow, meadows and hillslopes, house roofs and church spires seemed almost as unsubstantial and dream-like as in the visions of them that he had so often seen in his mind's eye by the camp-fire and on the march. But his heart sang within him that it was all a joyful reality, and his hungry eyes feasted on each well-known prospect as the train rushed on.

Before Hillsborough was passed it began to grow dusk, and when the train stopped at Maxfield, the station lights were gleaming through the growing darkness. Eliot alighted just behind the two ladies, who hurried across the platform and entered one of several carriages that were in waiting. All that he could see in the uncertain half-light was that the younger one was tall and trim of figure and quick and graceful in movement. He did not get a look at her face, but he heard her voice once more, and was sure that its vibrant melody would enable him to know her again.

As he started homeward it made him feel almost like a stranger to find that the straight board walk which used to lead from the end of the station platform to the turnpike had been replaced by a curving gravel path bordered by shrubbery, and he welcomed with a momentary sense of relief the sight of the old familiar elms in the little green on the other side of the road. He began to wonder what changes he would find at home, and to question whether he had done well in planning to surprise his mother by arriving before he was expected.

The night had fallen swiftly ; a few stars were already out, and here and there a window was lighted up. As he paused at the crossing to let several carriages from the station go by, three men came up behind him.

"I tell you there is some mystery about it," one of them said.

"The whole affair is certainly peculiar," declared another, whom Eliot instantly knew by his voice to be Maurice Vernor, an old classmate ; "and one of the queerest things about it is the way he acted when Gregory congratulated him on his engagement."

"When was that?" exclaimed the first speaker. "I hadn't heard before this afternoon that there was any engagement."

"Neither had Gregory," replied Vernor dryly, as they moved on only two or three paces behind Eliot. "But you know him — always taking things for granted and putting his foot in it. His wife heard some gossip a short time ago about Miss Lerwick and her mother having been shopping in the city a great deal, and told him that she believed there was an engagement, and that they were getting the trousseau ready. Of course it didn't take him long to twist this harmless bit of conjugal guesswork into a positive statement that the engagement had actually been announced. So when he saw the Major at the station yesterday morning he stepped up and congratulated him. I never in my life saw a man look more puzzled than the Major did at first. Then, as he grasped the meaning of what Gregory had said, he flushed violently and the next moment turned so pale that I thought he was going to faint. He recovered himself with a palpable effort, and looking Gregory straight in the eye with a glance that was like a sword thrust, he said, 'Mr. Gregory, gentlemen do not jest on such a subject and if I hear any more loose joking at the expense of the young lady whose name you have so unwarrantably coupled with mine, I shall hold you personally responsible.' And with that he swung on his heel and left Gregory literally quaking."

"But look here!" cried the first speaker. "You say this happened yesterday morning, and the wedding invitations were posted early enough to-day to go out by the last mail delivery this afternoon. You don't mean to tell me that there has been time enough in the interval for them to come to an understanding, set the day, order the invitations, and get them engraved, printed, addressed, and mailed so as to reach us when they did!"

"It doesn't seem possible," agreed Vernor.

"I tell you," pursued the first speaker, with impressive emphasis, "either the ordinary time-record for doing all these things has been broken into little bits, or else the Major lied to Gregory."

There was a significant pause, which Vernor ended. "I give it up," he said. "It's beyond me. But there's something wrong."

"I only wish I had the right to interfere and sift the matter," burst out the hitherto silent one of the trio. "I'm certain Miss Lerwick is being imposed upon in some way. I think that brother of hers might have had horse-sense enough to stay at home and look after her and his mother instead of skylarking after dagoes all around the Philippines."

A moment later "good-nights" were exchanged, and the last speaker came on alone at a more rapid pace. He passed Eliot with a swinging step, but hung on his heel for an instant at the next corner while he lighted a cigar. A carriage was just turning from the side street into "the Pike," and as the flare of the match fell for a second on his face, a voice — the same that Eliot had heard on the train and at the station — called from the vehicle:

"Oh, Mr. Gilbert! How fortunate! I was just on my way to your house. Would you mind taking this parcel to Harriet? She needs it for to-night; and I'm afraid my mother may be growing anxious about me. Thank you ever so much! Yes, I came out on the express with Mrs. Mercer. She returned from Washington this afternoon. I've just left her at her house. By the by, she'd only heard a hint about Philippa Lerwick and the Major; so I had to give her the details."

"I'll wager you didn't give her the very latest news about them, Miss Percival."

"What makes you think so? What is it?"

"Their wedding invitations are out; they came in the last delivery this afternoon."

"Mr. Gilbert! you don't mean it! Why, I told Mrs. Mercer that he hadn't proposed yet. When is it to be?"

"The seventeenth of next month, at Saint Paul's."

"Oh, I'm sure there must be some mistake. I shall go straight over to Philippa's this evening and ask what it means. Why, Mr. Gilbert, the Major went in on the train with me this morning, and he never mentioned Philippa nor gave me the slightest hint that there was anything between them; and he told me he would probably be away for three or four weeks."

"Three or four weeks! That's cool! The seventeenth is only a little more than three weeks away. He'll have to leave off the last week, if he means to be at the wedding."

By this time Eliot was beyond ear-shot, hurrying on more anxious than ever to reach home — his head in a whirl; a thousand thick-coming fears and conjectures treading tumultuously on each other's heels, as he hastened under the arching elms along "the Pike" and up the winding drive to Merryhill, the family home.

He faltered at the door, smitten with renewed fear as to the effect that the shock of his sudden return might have upon his mother. But quick ears within had heard his footfalls; there were rapid footsteps in the hall, the door opened, and his sister appeared on the threshold, while a little way behind her stood his mother, with one hand pressed against her bosom.

"Dear Eliot! I knew it was your step," cried Philippa, as he kissed her and then caught his mother in his arms.

There was no chance for any explanation in the early part of the evening, much as Eliot desired it. Even had there been no interruptions from Betty the housemaid, who tripped in several times, her face wreathed in smiles, to ask for directions, or from old Hugh the butler, who came in grinning broadly to get Master Eliot's baggage checks, it would not have been easy to make enquiries, for his mother and sister, who fairly beamed with happiness, so plied him with questions that he had little opportunity to ask any himself.

Even after dinner, when they went back to the fire-lighted library, the gentle catechizing was continued. But at length the tide of talk began to ebb; and finally a moment came when only the snap and crackle of the burning wood were audible as the leaping flames in the wide chimney-place sparkled over the shining brass of the andirons and fender and the polished mahogany of the furniture, and gleamed on the gilded backs of the serried rows of books all around the room, and sent fantastic shadows flickering over walls and ceiling.

Eliot's impatience for an explanation of the meaning of what he had heard on his way home had become somewhat tempered by reluctance to intrude a topic that might disturb the quiet of this peaceful hour. But if the habit of self-control, born of his two years' training as a soldier, had up to this moment enabled him to repress every sign of his turmoil of mind, the habit of acting with decision and without delay, acquired in the same hard school, now impelled him to take prompt advantage of this opportunity to learn at once what he wished to know. Without hesitation, therefore, he turned to speak to his sister; but, as he looked at her, his purpose wavered and a sudden strange diffidence seized him.

This was not the Philippa of former days, girlish, care-free and open-hearted — this regal woman reclining in her easy-chair as on a throne of state, while the firelight shone on the coiled glory of her burnished hair, the white and rose of her flower-like face, and the exquisite outlines of her shapely form. He was still debating how he should begin to question her, when she looked at him, a tender smile curving her imperious mouth and brightening in her clear brown eyes, and said with a pretty air of gentle reproach:

"You have not congratulated me yet, Eliot."

"About what, Philippa?" he enquired, innocently.

"Didn't you get my letter?" she asked in surprise.

"Which one?" he responded. "I haven't had any from you since I left Manila."

She exclaimed in dismay. "I sent it in care of the steamship company at San Francisco," she explained. "I was sure it would reach there in time. But I remember now, you told us that the steamer made an unusually quick trip and got in ahead of time."

"Yes," he assented, "that's probably why the letter missed me. But you haven't told me what the news is yet."

"I am going to be married," she said softly.

"My dear girl," he cried. "He is the one to be congratulated."

"Ah, but you won't say so, when you know who it is."

He was too absorbed, however, to take in fully the implication of her words. On the instant he came to a decision. "Perhaps I do know him in a way," he said, gravely; and added, in response to her look of questioning surprise: "I overheard some people talking about you both, on my way out from the city, and, to be frank, what they said rather startled me."

"What did they say?" Philippa calmly enquired.

"They said, for one thing," Eliot replied, "that 'the Major,' as they all called him, has been coming here after nine o'clock almost every evening since some time last June, and staying until nearly midnight."

"Oh, no!" cried Philippa, quickly, "he has called only two or three times a week, and he has never stayed much after eleven; has he, mother?"

"No, dear," answered Mrs. Lerwick. "But it is true that he always comes after nine o'clock; and you know, Philippa, I have repeatedly told you he ought to call at a more seasonable hour."

"But he is unable to," protested Philippa.

"You know well enough you have admitted that he has never given you any good reason why he cannot," returned her mother, severely; "and he always calls everywhere else except here at the proper hours."

"That is strange," remarked Eliot.

"Oh, it is not the only strange thing about his conduct," declared Mrs. Lerwick. "He never seems like himself when he is here; he is as prim and stiff as an automaton; and sometimes he ignores what is said to him in a way that I think is positively rude. But Philippa can see nothing to criticise, and he is certainly devoted to her. So far as I can learn, he talks of nothing but his love for her, and hers for him. In speech he is a paragon of a lover. Otherwise the man is a perfect stick. Would you believe it, Eliot, he has never even offered to kiss her!"

"Mother!" cried Philippa, with a crimson face.

"It's true; you told me so yourself; and you didn't warn me not to tell."

"You like him, anyhow," declared Philippa, desperately, "you know you do."

"Yes, dear, I do," admitted Mrs. Lerwick at once. "He has impressed me from the first as one of the best and most delightful men I have ever met; that is, he has impressed me that way everywhere except in my own house. It's curious, Eliot, now I think of it, how I've seen more of him and learned to know and like him better elsewhere than I have here; and how Philippa has seen so little of him anywhere except here that, if he had not called on her so regularly, she would hardly know him. My belief is that he's so sensitive and has such a horror of gossip that he has tried to avoid it, and has simply made matters worse, as retiring people are so apt to do."

"By the by, how long have you been engaged?" Eliot abruptly asked his sister at this point.

"Just eleven days to-morrow," she replied, with amusing promptitude.

"Eleven days!" he echoed, "and the invitations out already! Isn't that rather rushing matters?"

Philippa flushed. "Mark had special reasons," she explained, "for keeping our engagement quiet and for hurrying the wedding. But how did you know about the invitations?"

"I overheard about them," he replied, "and more than that, I overheard Maurice Vernor telling how your Major denied at the station yesterday morning that you and he were engaged."

Mrs. Lerwick uttered an exclamation and Philippa looked mystified, but incredulous. Before she could speak, Betty went bustling through the hall, and immediately Eliot heard the voice of Miss Percival at the front door, and Philippa hastened out to greet her.

A low-toned colloquy followed, interspersed with silvery laughter and the sound of kisses, and then the two came into the library and Eliot was introduced.

"I've heard so much about you, Captain Lerwick," said the newcomer, graciously extending a little hand, "that you hardly seem like a stranger. I hope you have entirely recovered from your wound."

Her limpid gray eyes looked solicitously into his. But when, still retaining her hand, he assured her, with needless fervor, that he was quite well again, the humorous dimples at the corners of her large, mobile mouth deepened, and her red lips parted in a smile so bewitchingly sweet and yet so roguishly challenging that, with soldierly promptitude, he lost his heart to her then and there.

Meanwhile Philippa had lighted a large piano lamp and now drew her friend down beside her on a sofa, and for the next half-hour the talk was wholly about bridesmaids and dress and the wedding arrangements. But Eliot could see that their pretty neighbor had something on her mind, and at last out it came.

"Philippa dear," she asked, hesitatingly, "is the wedding really to be on the seventeenth? Is the date on the invitations correct?"

Philippa looked at her in amazement. "Of course it is, Rhoda," she replied. "Why do you ask?"

"Because the seventeenth is only a little more than three weeks off," answered the girl, blushing with embarrassment, "and the Major told me this morning on the train that he was going away and would probably not be back for three or — four weeks."

Eliot saw his sister's hands close convulsively and the color die out of her face. But with assumed carelessness, she answered in a strained voice, "Probably he did not stop to think exactly how short the time is to the seventeenth."

Rhoda changed the subject at once, and, after a few commonplace remarks, said that she must go. She declined Eliot's offer to see her home, declaring that the maid who had come with her would be all the escort she needed. Eliot did not press the point. He had a question which he was anxious to ask, and, as soon as their visitor had gone, he asked it.

"Philippa," he enquired, bluntly, "did you know that the Major was going away?"

"No, Eliot."

"Didn't he speak about it last evening? Don't you know where he has gone?" questioned Mrs. Lerwick.

"No, mother."

"Humph!" ejaculated Eliot, indignantly. "By the way, who is he? You haven't told me yet."

"You know him," responded Philippa. "Major Bruerton."

"Bruerton! Good God!" exclaimed Eliot, staring at her.

"What is it?" she cried, growing paler if possible than before, as she watched his darkening face.

"There is some rascality back of all this," he said at last. "Just what, I can't fathom now. But I've something to tell you about Bruerton that I never thought to breathe to any one. Under the circumstances, it's only right that you should be told. As you know, he commanded our battalion for several months, and took a great fancy to me. I liked him immensely, and we became very intimate, and when I was wounded he helped to carry me off the field. That evening I told him about Aunt Caroline's diamond ring that mother insisted I should take with me because she thought that it might help me where money might not, if I ever happened to be in a tight place. I showed it to him, and begged him to keep it for me. But he demurred, because he was likely to be in the field for an indefinite time, and feared he might lose it. He was much worried about it, and finally hid it under the lining in one of the bottom corners of my leather despatch-case. In the night I was roused from a doze by some one moving near me. It was Bruerton, and he had my despatch-case in his hands. I saw him take out the ring, slip the case back behind my pillow, and leave the tent. I was so dazed by the surprise and suddenness of it, and so weak and light-headed, that I never stirred nor spoke. I thought it might be a delirious fancy, and in the morning I asked the attendant if any one had been in to see me. He said that Major Bruerton had. I managed to get out the case and examine it. The ring was gone. I have never seen Bruerton since."

As Eliot ended, his mother threw her arms about Philippa, crying, "Oh, my poor darling!" and burst into tears. But Philippa herself, erect and dry-eyed, continued to regard him a little longer with an inscrutable look. Then, murmuring that the lamplight hurt her eyes and the firelight was pleasanter, she gently disengaged herself from her mother's clinging embrace, and, rising to her feet, steadied herself with her left hand on the back of the sofa and reached over to put out the light.

Eliot saw that she was trembling in every limb, and stepped forward to help her. As he did so, his eye was caught by the flash of a diamond sparkling on the third finger of her left hand in the full radiance of the lamplight. The setting was of a rather peculiar pattern. He stood stock-still gazing at it for an instant, and then, seizing her hand, raised it nearer the light and examined the ring intently.

"Who gave you this?" he asked.

"Mark," she replied, breathlessly. "It is my engagement ring."

He dropped her hand and stepped back, facing them both.

"Mother! Philippa!" he said, hoarsely. "I will take my oath that this is Aunt Caroline's ring that Bruerton stole from me at San Mateo."

Philippa swayed, and he was just in time to catch her as she fell. She had fainted.

In the anxious weeks that followed, no message was received from the missing Major, and no glimmer of light was shed on the vexed questions, why he had left and where he had gone. In all Maxfield there was no one about whom so much was said and so little was known as Major Mark Lawton Bruerton. But Philippa's confidence in him never wavered. Even the shock of Eliot's revelations could not shake it. For her faith in her lover's loyalty and integrity rose superior to all such trivial things as evidence and proof. She knew that he could explain everything when he came back, and that he would come back she did not doubt.

So the wedding preparations went half-heartedly on, and the day for the ceremony drew nigh and finally dawned. In the interval Eliot had naturally found it necessary to hold frequent conferences with Rhoda Percival, ostensibly about Philippa; and it was astonishing how many points were constantly arising that needed immediate and prolonged consideration before they could be satisfactorily settled. Doubtless he derived more profit, if less pleasure, from his discussions with Maurice Vernor, and his occasional consultations with Rhoda's father and Dr. Heath, the family physician; but he generally found it easier to dispense with these than with his talks with Rhoda, especially when some detail of the wedding had to be settled. Feeling sure, however, that there would be no ceremony, Eliot had privately had a circular engraved, announcing that the wedding had been postponed, for unexpected and unavoidable causes, to a date that would be announced later; and he had arranged to have copies of this circular delivered about an hour before the time set for the ceremony, if the Major had not returned and explained matters before then.

When therefore Philippa, looking like a spectral Dido in her shimmering wedding robe and trailing orange blossoms, insisted on being driven to St. Paul's at the appointed hour, it was to peer forlornly into an empty church, and pace in tragic silence a draughty vestibule, and then pass back with a stony face to the carriage, and be driven home in despair too deep for tears.

As a last resort Eliot had that morning bethought himself of telegraphing to a friend in the War Department at Washington on the chance that, although the Major had resigned from the army, the department might have kept track of him. Late in the afternoon came a long reply stating that Major Bruerton had recently been in San Francisco in attendance on a private court of enquiry held, pending action upon his resignation, to investigate charges against him of conduct prejudicial to the interests of the service. The court had reserved its decision owing, it was said, to the perplexing fact that, although the testimony proved that the Major had done what was charged, it also proved that he had unquestionably done it from the most worthy and commendable motives, while he himself denied positively that he had done it at all.

About half-past eight that evening, Eliot was sitting alone in the library at Merryhill, trying to make out what this fresh instance of the Major's incomprehensible conduct could mean, when Vernor came in with the news that the missing man had returned and was at home. Three-quarters of an hour later, the two friends were on their way to the Major's, in company with several other hastily summoned witnesses, including Mr. Percival, Dr. Heath and young Gilbert. At their destination they were informed that the Major had gone out at the hour when he usually called on Miss Lerwick. Hastening to Merryhill, they entered the drawing-room to find Mrs. Lerwick stooping over Philippa, who was seated upon a fauteuil sobbing as if her heart would break, while a few feet away, stiffly balanced on the edge of a reception chair, was Major Bruerton.

He was a tall, compactly built, strikingly handsome man, with piercing eyes and a soldierly presence. His gaze was fixed intently on his betrothed, and there was a pathetic expression of baffled devotion and deep yearning in his look. As Eliot, Vernor, and two or three others stepped in front of him, his glance wavered as if he were trying to gaze past them at Philippa again. Otherwise their presence did not seem to disconcert him in the least, and he did not alter his attitude.

"Perhaps, Major Bruerton," said Eliot, sternly, "you will con-descend to explain your unexpected presence here this evening after your most extraordinary absence from town this morning."

The Major slowly rose, and still more slowly sought out Eliot's sombre countenance in the circle of unfriendly faces before him.

"Eliot," he said, in a monotonous voice, "I did not expect to find you here." Then, after a pause, he added, "I came to see Philippa."

To the onlookers his cool indifference of manner and extreme deliberation of speech savored of studied insolence. Eliot's blood glowed through the dark tan of his cheeks, and with a fierce oath, before any one could interpose, he struck the Major full in the face.

The latter, to the amazement of every one, made no effort to ward off the blow. With a strange, distressed cry, he staggered against the chair on which he had been sitting, and clutched the back of it. Steadying himself, he gave a most portentous yawn, and straining back his shoulders and half raising his disengaged arm with a prolonged muscular contraction, as if he were stretching, he rose to his full height, and glancing round the ring of lookers-on with a wide-eyed stare of utter bewilderment, exclaimed in a thrilling tone, "What does this mean? Where am I?" and sank back unconscious.

Under Dr. Heath's prompt treatment he soon revived, and a half-hour later the doctor entered the library, to which the rest of the party had retired, rubbing his hands with satisfaction and showing a cheerful countenance.

"I am happy to be able to report, gentlemen," he said, "that no ill effects are likely to follow the shock which Major Bruerton has suffered, and which in some instances of this kind has been attended by the most serious results. As you have doubtless already surmised, he was a somnambulist of the most pronounced type. I say 'was' because, so far as medical science can forecast the future, he will never be one again. The blow that roused him from his life-in-sleep broke forever the fetters that bound him to that extraordinary existence. The mystery of many of his acts is a mystery no longer. Although the impulses that governed him in his active sleep owed their origin to his waking thoughts and feelings, he was as completely unconscious in one existence of all that he did in the other as if he had actually been two men, each living in a different hemisphere. He tells me that for years he has been subject to attacks of overpowering drowsiness in the evening. At first, when they recurred only at long intervals, he tried to resist them ; but, as they increased in frequency, he gradually fell into the habit of going to bed as soon as he felt them coming on. He had begun to fear that in time they might force him to relinquish society, as they had already caused him to resign from the army. This dread and the charges hanging over him kept him from showing the charming young lady who has promised him her hand any attention in his waking life, but could not prevent him from following the irresistible impulse of his heart in his life asleep. It is somewhat trying to her to find that the man who wooed and won her is in a sense not the man who is to wed her. But"—and the good doctor's eyes twinkled—"you will be glad to know that I have every reason to believe the Major will eventually succeed in reconciling her to the change."

The doctor's faith in the Major's ultimate success was soon after fully justified when a double wedding, in which Philippa and the Major and Rhoda Percival and Eliot were the principals, was solemnized with elaborate ceremonial in St. Paul's, at high noon one October day, before a large and fashionable assemblage.

One of Eliot's wedding presents to his sister was Aunt Caroline's diamond ring, which, in spite of his protest that it was "all in the family," the Major insisted on restoring to him.

"Well," said Eliot, as he finally yielded and reluctantly took the ring back, "if you will compel me to become an accessory after the fact and a receiver of stolen property, at least tell me one thing: Where in the world did you discover such a safe hiding-place for it that you never found it when you were awake?"

"My dear boy," was the reply, "to answer that question I would have to walk in my sleep again, which God forbid that I should ever do. I fear that the hiding-place of the ring will have to remain the one unsolved mystery of a curious courtship."

The Window of Tonathiu.*

BY SCOTT IRVING LITCHFIELD.

VERY traveller who has penetrated the interior of Mexico to that stony region, the "pedregal" of Queretaro, has seen, at a distance at least, that huge cliff which runs from north to south and rises abruptly from the level plain to a sheer height of nearly five hundred feet, and, if of an adventurous disposition, has even attempted the hazardous and almost impossible task of climbing to a collection of archaic ruins perched on a wide shelf within a few yards of the summit. If he has had the rare fortune of gaining that nearly inaccessible place he has stood upon a spot from which few human beings ever departed alive.

On the morning of Monday, May 28, 1900, James Mason left the camp from which, the previous noon, he had studied the distant cliff, attracted by a brilliant flash of light, which crept slowly down the face of the precipice and suddenly disappeared. He was accompanied by Mara, an Indian, whom he had succored in a dying condition in a lava desert. When, at ten o'clock, they reached the base of the cliff, they separated, Mason choosing a direct ascent toward the most prominent of the ruined structures, while the native sought an easier route promising less fatigue to his weakened system, not yet restored to normal health.

Mason, though a practised climber, found the cliff the stiffest bit of scaling he had ever attempted. The wall was of a hard, greenish-black basalt, and even the edges of the fissures, which gave precarious hold, were of glossy smoothness. More than once his heart stood still as his fingers slipped in particularly dangerous places. But by the aid of tough grasses and cacti growing in the crevices he worked his way upward till but fifty feet above him projected the ledge which had formed his objective point. Hanging on by fingers and toes, flattening his body to the wall and struggling upward foot by foot, he at last clambered over the edge of the projection. It proved to be a barren little spot, nearly circular in shape and but a few feet in diameter, and thickly carpeted by a fine gray dust. As Mason paused to take breath before lifting himself over the low rocky parapet surrounding this bed of dust, he noticed that the color of the cliff had abruptly changed to a dull gray, and where he rubbed against it it crumbled to powder. Losing no time, he pulled himself into a secure position, perceiving that his upward journey was ended, in that direction at least, for the wall above was absolutely perpendicular, and a portion of a ruined temple overhung his resting place.

* Copyright, 1901, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

The fine gray powder rose in clouds, irritating his eyes and nostrils, as he essayed to traverse the narrow ledge to seek an egress, but at almost the first step his foot slipped into a crack concealed by the deep dust, and he fell, with a sprained ankle pinned into the crevice so that the least movement not only caused the keenest agony but bound the imprisoned foot more securely.

Frantic shouts to Mara brought only mocking echoes from the cliff, and at last the explorer lay exhausted and silent on his dusty bed, staring helplessly upward into the intensely blue and cloudless sky, feverishly wondering how long it would be before help came from the Indian, or his comrades in the distant camp became alarmed. He remembered some strange looks and gestures of the native when attention was first called to the ruins, and his heart sank with a vague dread.

His gaze wandered over the face of the cliff above and the overhanging roof of the temple, on a portion of whose ancient floor he now knew himself to be lying. The roof was far above him, and was of circular form, composed of huge blocks, surrounding a central disc of crystal clearness, smaller than its fellows. It was about four feet in diameter, convex, and perfectly transparent. A small bird, flying above, was magnified to enormous proportions.

As he lay studying this curious mosaic, the sun, in its upward course, touched with a shaft of light the outer edge of the great lens, and, following the golden beam with his eyes, Mason saw a wonderful sight. When the ray was cast on the ashy grayness of the cliff, an elliptical blotch of intense light sprang up beneath its touch, and the crumbling wall slowly took on a dull red glow, such as one sees in a dying ember. As the sun approached the zenith the splash of light with its accompanying glow of heat crept gradually downward and assumed a more exactly circular shape, decreasing in size. The blinding spot slowly descended the wall, leaving a smoking wake behind it. As Mason watched, a lizard ran from its hiding place and, crossing the scorching pathway, curled and smoked and fell to the man's side, a brittle cinder!

With a hot but freezing flush of horror Mason realized that he was lying in the focus of an immense burning glass, fixed in place with fiendish ingenuity in some bygone age! The shelf on which he rested was the destined converging place of those terrible rays!

In a spasm of terror he raved and cursed and prayed, but still the relentless pencil of light grew smaller and brighter, and came nearer and nearer! Already he could feel the heat from the glowing, crumbling wall.

His brain rocked with the heat and the horror and he closed his eyes. Through his half-closed eyelids he could still see and feel the glowing beam of heat, but now, as in a dream, a haze seemed to intervene, and to overspread the heavens. Birds, with frightened cries, flew by with quickly beating wings. The sky was darkened. Then all noises, except that of a tremulous breeze, died away, and a strange, weird hush fell upon the earth.

Mason opened his eyes. It was not a dream. The earth was silent, the heavens dark! The blinding ray of heat had disappeared, and the wall, still warm, had lost its threatening incandescence. Bewildered and wondering, he lay gazing about him, and was not conscious of surprise when a portion of the wall at the end of the shelf moved a little and then swung outward, revealing the mouth of a small tunnel, framing the pallid face and blood-stained form of Mara, the Indian.

Speechless he remained, as the native released him from the durance so nearly fatal. He could not understand the awful danger escaped, the strange silence and darkened sky, Mara's bloody garments and wild expression.

The Indian spoke :

“Listen to the voice of Mara, the last of the Jonaces — the last of the priests of Tonathiu! Listen in awe, and give thanks that you are not as these ashes! You saved my life from the desert; I have saved yours from a greater power — from the god Tonathiu himself — who has permitted me to do so. This is his temple, the ancient sacrificial place, where, each day at noon, Tonathiu looks down through yonder window to kiss that which reposes here. I knew that you would climb to this spot, and that naught I could say or do would stay you. So I came by another way, meaning to lead you hence by the secret passage of the priests, but a puma attacked me. I killed him at last, and as I fought I prayed and promised Tonathiu my life for yours, if he would only save you. Behold him now! He listened to his faithful servant, and veiled his face! But he shall not be cheated of a sacrifice!”

Suddenly waving his arms above his head, the last of his race plunged to death, four hundred feet below!

Over the grim basaltic cliff a pale light had been spreading, growing stronger as Mason gazed, till the scene was once more bathed in golden sunshine. Then he knew.

As he groped and stumbled through the dark passage to safety, it was with a pang of pity for the superstitious, self-sacrificing pagan that he remembered the date — the 28th of May — the day of the sun's eclipse, and that the scene of this adventure lay in the path of its totality.

The Man from Beyond.*

BY FRANK LILLIE POLLOCK.

PROFESSOR BIGELOW'S expedition, it will be remembered, sailed from St. John's, Newfoundland, on the 29th of May. It was despatched by a Canadian university, assisted by the Dominion Government, and its objects were to collect specimens of Arctic natural history and to more accurately map the northern coast of Hudson Bay. About the middle of June its members landed on the terribly rugged and forbidding extremity of Baffin's Land and penetrated fifty or sixty miles into the interior, and there, to their unspeakable astonishment, they found a white man, alone, fur-clad, painfully moving south on foot, and apparently demented.

At first they had to use force to make him stay with the party, and it was no easy matter, he being a big man and tremendously strong. They could not determine his nationality, for, though there were good linguists in the party, the man remained sullenly silent. At long intervals he muttered to himself a few words, but they afforded no clue. It was thought that he might be a Russian; he had long, shaggy, fair hair and blue eyes, though his face, weather-beaten, seamed and cracked with repeated freezings, was as dark as any Eskimo's. It was surmised that he had been lost from the crew of some whaler and that the terrible hardships he must have endured had upset his mind. The miracle was that he had survived at all.

Perhaps the most interesting phase of the man's mania was an irresistible tendency to travel toward the south, and it was only when they went in that direction that he would go willingly. He never could be deceived about the direction. He seemed magnetized like a compass needle and could pick out the cardinal points in the darkest night or the blindest snowstorm. He would never sleep save with his head toward the Pole, and from his slumber he would sometimes start, crying, "Sood! Sood!" and bolt towards the south, and then he would have to be brought back by force.

* Copyright, 1901, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

A few weeks later the expedition came upon a band of Eskimos, who recognized the stranger, and told a vague tale of his having come down from the farthest north, — from that unknown region which their fancy peopled with strange beasts and ferocious men. They said he had been wandering southwards for a long time, being always well treated by the aborigines, who attributed to him a supernatural character on account of his madness.

When at the end of the summer the scientists turned homeward, the stranger was, of course, taken with them, and during the southward voyage he was quieter and seemed more content than ever before. He was placed in a hospital, where those in charge decided that the case was not in their line. When his hair and beard were cut a long, reddish scar was revealed, running completely across the top of the head. But it was entirely healed, and as the man seemed in no especial need of medical attention he was removed to an asylum for the insane. He did not prove a very tractable subject, however, for he rebelled against the detention and his great strength made him difficult to control. The impulse of his mental disease still seemed to be an irresistible tendency toward the south, and he made several unsuccessful attempts to escape, with attacks of violent delirium at each failure.

From the first, the scar on the patient's head had attracted the attention of the physicians of the asylum, and they agreed that the man's insanity might very well have resulted from an injury to the brain. When it became evident that the poor fellow could never recover his mental faculties under the mild treatment being pursued, and that his more frequent paroxysms were rapidly wearing out his rugged physique, so that his death was only a matter of time unless relief could be found, the question of an operation to relieve the pressure upon the brain which was thought to exist was seriously considered. As there were no relatives or friends to be consulted, it was decided to perform the operation, with its undoubtedly grave risks, as a humanitarian measure, and not at all from mere curiosity, as the procedure was by no means new.

But the immediate result of the operation, which passed off without a hitch, was quite unexpected and led to a most remarkable discovery. Lieutenant Ross, the only person remaining in the city of those who had brought the man back from the far north, had been invited to be present. Possibly the patient, on recovering sanity, might recognize him as a link connecting the present with the past, and feel that he was not alone among strangers, especially if unable to rally.

Ross remained just outside the operating-room door, from which, after a long time, one of the surgeons emerged, with news of the success of his colleagues, and holding out a thin bit of yellowish metal, as large as half a small knife-blade. "See," he said. "Squeezed against the left lobe of the brain we found this."

"Brass!" exclaimed Ross.

"A bit of brass, undoubtedly. He must have been struck with some brass-mounted article and this bit penetrated to the brain and has been causing all the trouble since. There's every reason to hope that he will have all his wits again when he recovers from the ether, and you'd better see him when he revives."

So Ross waited with the two physicians watching beside the cot. The patient was long in reviving, however. Evening came on, and still he lay unconscious in the dimly lighted ward, moaning at intervals, and sometimes muttering unintelligibly. Twice the Lieutenant caught the word "Sood," which the stranger had used so often. Perhaps it was the only word they would ever hear from him. Ross knew that the looks and actions of the surgeons, impassive as they were, could mean but one thing.

In about an hour the third physician, who had taken away the bit of metal, came into the ward, his eyes shining with excitement.

"Look here!" he ejaculated in a low tone, exhibiting the fragment taken from the man's skull. "Do you know what this is?"

"Why, brass — isn't it?" answered one of the others, still keeping an eye on the sinking patient.

"Gold, by all the tests. I've just been examining it in the laboratory. It's pure gold — but it's hard as steel! Gentlemen, it's tempered! Tempered gold — who ever heard of such a thing!"

With his pocket knife he hacked at the edge of the bit of yellow metal, which was not notched by the process.

"It's been part of some weapon," continued the doctor, excitedly, but in the same subdued tone. "A knife-blade, arrow-head or spear-point. But where in the world can they harden gold like steel, and make swords and spears out of it?"

The members of the little group looked at one another, and the full wonder of the thing began to grow upon Ross as well as upon the doctor who had made the wonderful discovery.

"Suppose he dies," said Ross.

"He mustn't," was the impatient answer, "not till he has told us his story. Think of it! It's a thing that science daren't dream of. Wait, we'll get the secret out of him!"

The three medical men consulted eagerly together, while the patient, who had ceased his moaning, lay in what seemed to Ross a perfectly comatose condition. A couple of nurses were sent for and a stimulant was administered.

The effect was very soon apparent. The man moved slightly, a spark of pink came into his cheeks, and he wearily opened his eyes with a new intelligence in them. For a moment the doctors debated whether he should be encouraged to speak, but the patient himself cut short the dispute by pronouncing some words, though in a scarcely audible tone. They were unintelligible, moreover, from being in a language which no one present understood.

"Where am I?" he whispered, this time in French.

"In Newfoundland — among friends!" impulsively replied the third physician.

A perplexed look crossed the man's face, fading gradually into the blank relapse of unconsciousness.

The doctor looked appealingly at the chief surgeon, asking:

"Before it's too late?"

He was answered by a nod of acquiescence, more stimulants were administered, and again the man seemed to revive, but very slightly. His lips moved, but he did not open his eyes.

"Who are your friends — tell us your name?" said the third medical man, speaking very distinctly, close to his ear. The dying man's lips moved again, a barely audible whisper escaped them, but the words were in the unknown former tongue. Their sound was like "Yager on dray." He repeated them twice, and after several minutes of silence again muttered, "Sood! Sood!"

"It's the end," said the third physician, turning away in disappointment. "He'll never speak again." And he was right. At half-past ten the man was dead, having uttered no other word.

The strange mystery of this Arctic castaway's life and death continued to impress most powerfully the imagination of Lieutenant Ross. To fancy where he must have been, into what undiscovered regions he must have penetrated — perhaps the real El Dorado — was a fruitless and exasperating mental exercise, but one which he could not forego. The secret had eluded him, but the evidence of its existence remained. The scrap of yellow metal was gold beyond all doubt.

A month later Ross visited the college, where he told the story just as it is told here to one of the faculty, who chanced to be an authority on the northern languages. When Ross related the unknown man's frequent repetition of the word "Sood," he received an addition to his knowledge of comparative philology.

"None of you seem to have known Swedish," said the linguist. "'Syd,' pronounced 'Sood,' is the Swedish for 'south.'"

"Of course, we knew that south was meant," replied Ross, "but none of us identified it as Swedish." Then he went on and repeated the dying man's last words, as he recollected their sound.

"What's that?" cried the professor of languages, sharply.

"'Yager on dray' was what it sounded like," repeated Ross.

His listener sat literally tongue-tied.

"You pack of idiots!" he finally managed to articulate. "And you don't even seem to have tried to find out what those words meant. Why, you should have got interpreters for every known tongue! And to think you don't know who that man was! You don't know that you've watched one of the heroes of the century die! You —"

"Calm yourself," said Ross, "remember that the man could talk French, and that we could have understood all that he might have said, but for his fatal weakness. But," he added, with a vague premonition of some great loss to the world, "what do the words mean?"

"'Jeg er Andrée,' " said the linguist, slowly, "is Swedish for 'I am Andrée!'"

The Tale That Hasn't Been Told

NO life is without some spice of romance or adventure — some happening out of the ordinary sequence of events. Stored in the mind of every intelligent man and woman is at least one original story, for the experience of every human being includes an incident or accident — an adventure or a conception of the imagination — which, told effectively, cannot fail to interest. If the readers are in other walks of life, have had other and different experiences, so much more will they be fascinated, for the novel and unexpected constitute the sauce which gives relish to the common fare of daily existence.

Never has the man or woman with a good story to tell had so wide a field, so vast a number of listeners, or so great an opportunity for profit as to-day. And the number of readers increases much more rapidly than the number of writers who gain the public ear. Few with something new to tell that this ever-increasing host of story readers wants to read have found a market, because they are unknown — lack literary reputation, which counts for so much with other publishers and counts for nothing with The Black Cat.

The greatest author is yet unknown, the best story is yet untold, for this is distinctively the age of progress in every department of human effort. The greatest song has not been composed. The last immortal poem has not been penned. The short story that may prove worthy the highest award ever bestowed is now lying fallow in the brain of some reader of this announcement.

$10,285 For Those Who Tell

The prize story contest of The Black Cat which is now open presents an extraordinary opportunity for known writers and the opportunity of a life-time for unknown writers. As, in the interest of its readers and publisher alike, The Black Cat is determined to publish the best stories that genius and skill can produce, all may assist in spreading the board from which they will feast in future by bringing this tournament to the notice of any who have stories to tell.

From the outset, The Black Cat has been conducted in the commonsense belief — which its whole experience confirms — that the art of story writing is not, in this age of intelligence, confined to any section or class, nor to be found in the possession of only a favored few. Accordingly, neither name nor fame has ever counted anything in the judging of stories submitted for its consideration. Neither previous achievements in literature, nor notoriety acquired in some other field, can take the place of merit in the story to be passed upon.

On the contrary, hundreds of men and women, before unknown, have, by its acceptance of their work, found their way into the ranks of the recognized and well-paid authors, and scarcely any of the army who have gained admission to the pages of The Black Cat are personally known to any one connected with it. It matters not whether a writer is known or unknown; if his work excels he has an equal chance of success with any and all, provided his story be submitted in accordance with the printed conditions.

What The Prizes Are

IN this contest the prizes are the richest ever offered for short stories. From the beginning The Black Cat has paid five and ten times what other publications pay and now it surpasses its own unrivalled record. With the lowest prize $100 cash, and many others ranging from $125 to $2,100, their total aggregating $10,285, the opportunity to reap rich rewards is indeed a golden one.

The capital prize: a first-class tour of the world, consuming 179 days and costing $2,100, under the guidance of the famous house, The Raymond & Whitcomb Co., is far and away the most interesting, instructive, and luxurious reward ever offered for a short story; one cash prize of $1,000, one of $500, two of $300 each, a $1,300 steam automobile of latest model; three cash prizes of $200 each, four of $150 each; a $350 round-trip from Boston to San Francisco, consuming 20 days, a $150 round trip from Boston to Cuba, consuming 15 days, with sufficient cash to see, examine and enjoy; a $500 Crown Piano, renowned for its unsurpassed tone, quality and workmanship; five cash prizes of $125 each; an Angelus, $250, that marvel of mechanical ingenuity which plays perfectly any piano and doubles its pleasure; a $100 Oliver and $110 Fox writing machine; fifteen cash prizes of $100 each — these form an array of prizes that should tempt creative brains to tell for The Black Cat the cleverest tales ever told.

How To Win

A competitor need not cross the sea for a plot; need not step over the threshold of home to find material replete with human interest; need not journey beyond the portals of his or her own fancy for a story which, if well told, will charm the reading world. Select a subject with which you are familiar. A better story can be told about Mary Ann than has yet been told about Queen Anne. There are men and women without number who have the sort of stories to tell the public wants, and there are many exceptional men and women who possess ability sufficient to bring them fame and fortune if they could get a hearing. To all these The Black Cat will give a hearing. It is a matter of history and every-day occurrence that other publishers strive to catch popular favor by booming the fame of an author rather than by standing squarely on the merits of the author's writing. Indifferent stories by noted writers are eagerly bought and publicly praised before they are even written, while clever stories by unknown writers go begging for years after they are written.

The story of David Harum was offered to publisher after publisher and its invalid author never lived to see the marvelous success it achieved when it was finally offered to the public. Lorna Doone was rejected right and left. Eben Holden, another phenomenal hit, after being declined and declined and declined, scored so great a sale that its author's later stories were eagerly bought before they were begun.

Your Chance Of Success

NOT only in the amount of its prizes does The Black Cat tournament present to writers greater incentives than all other story contests, but the young and inexperienced in particular, whose work, while possessing merit, may still fail when brought into competition with that of the more experienced, find here their opportunity. For in addition to the stories receiving the prizes named on the preceding pages, amounting to $10,285, those unsuccessful in the competition but deemed desirable will, as explained in the printed conditions, receive special awards of not less than $100 each, or we will offer to purchase the same for cash. The increased chances which this gives to all who compete is shown by the circumstance that in previous contests more than $2,000 was paid for such unsuccessful yet available stories. Some stories have good plots, imperfectly developed; others need condensation or editing to be available, but contain clever incidents.

If you are in doubt as to the kind of story that will prove successful read in The Black Cat some of the tales that have won in former contests. The back numbers containing these will all soon be permanently out of print (half of them already are) and the Gripsack offer advertised on another page of this issue is one that every story lover and story writer should take advantage of. It can never be duplicated. Those having complete sets of all back numbers already ask two and three times the original cost.

Merit Alone Counts

From the first, The Black Cat has been exclusively devoted to short, original complete stories; has relied for success solely upon the superiority and excellence of its stories, and its founder and publisher has personally passed final judgment upon the manuscripts submitted. The phenomenal popular endorsement his judgment has received, the fact that no one can possibly have so great an interest in its future success as he personally has — these are the reasons why he will continue to be the judge as to what does and what does not meet the requirements of The Black Cat. In doing this he feels, moreover, that he is simply exercising the universal buyer's right: he who pays is entitled to his choice. That his decisions are free from favoritism and governed solely by merit is proved by the fact that not one of fifty of those whose stories have been accepted is personally known to him. As a check upon the wholesale offering of carelessly prepared, undesirable manuscripts, it is required that an annual subscription to The Black Cat be sent with each story submitted in this contest. As the cost of handling the manuscripts alone — recording, reading, filing and returning — will far exceed the amount received from subscriptions, and as the total outlay connected with the competition will exceed $30,000 the profits from subscription receipts cut absolutely no figure.

To facilitate careful consideration, deliberate judgment and prompt decision, it is necessary that competitors should send their stories as early as possible. Don't wait till the latest moment, but send your story as soon as it is ready, and be sure to comply with the conditions on page 47 of this issue.

BELOW is a list of the prizes. The capital prize--first-class tour of the world ticket--will be delivered to the winner with check covering expenses to Boston and return. The same applies to the 6th and 17th prizes. All cash prizes will be paid by certified check on The International Trust Company, of Boston. The Automobile, Piano, Angelus and Typewriters will be delivered, freight prepaid, at any railway station. If preferred, prizes Nos. 1, 2, 5, 6, 9, 17, 23 or 24 may be converted into their cash equivalent, less the guarantee already paid to secure their delivery.

Total Prizes $10,285

1st.	Tour of The World, 179 days,	Actual Cost	$2,100
2d.	Surrey Automobile.....	Actual Cost	1,300
3d.	Cash.....		1,000
4th.	Cash.....		500
5th.	Crown Piano,	Actual Cost	500
6th.	Round Trip, Boston to San Francisco,		350
7th.	Cash.....		300
8th.	Cash.....		300
9th.	Angelus,	Actual Cost	250
10th.	Cash.....		200
11th.	Cash.....		200
12th.	Cash.....		200
13th to 16th.	Four Cash Prizes at $150 each.....		600
17th.	Round Trip, Boston to Cuba,		150
18th.	Cash.....		125
19th.	Cash.....		125
20th.	Cash.....		125
21st.	Cash.....		125
22d.	Cash.....		125
23d.	Fox Typewriter, } Actual Cost {	110
24th.	Oliver Typewriter, }		100
25th to 39th.	15 Cash Prizes at $100 each.....		1,500

COMPETITORS may choose their own themes. We especially desire, however, stories in which the morbid, unnatural and unpleasant are avoided rather than emphasized. Good, clean, humorous tales are desirable. No dialect stories, translations, plays or poems will be considered; nor any story not submitted strictly in accordance with the conditions. We want original stories, out of the ordinary, free from commonplace and padding, and interesting throughout.

Conditions :

1. Each manuscript must bear at the top of the first page the writer's real name and address, in full (if it is desired that the story be published under a pen name that must likewise be given), as also the number of words it contains, which may range from 1,500 to 6,000, but must not exceed the latter. Other things being equal, the shorter of two stories will be preferred.

2. Manuscripts must be plainly written (with typewriter or pen) on one side of paper only, on sheets not larger than 8 x 11 inches, must be sent unrolled, postage or express charges fully prepaid, and accompanied by addressed and stamped envelopes for return. Letters advising submittal of stories must be enclosed with manuscripts, not sent separately. Manuscripts will be received and returned only at writers' risk. Upon our payment for a story the author relinquishes to us all rights thereto of whatsoever nature.

3. Every story must be strictly original and must, neither wholly nor in part, have appeared in print in any language. Every story will be judged solely on its own merits; the name or fame of a writer will carry absolutely no weight. And furthermore, every story will be valued, not in accordance with its length, but with its worth as a story.

4. With every manuscript there must be enclosed, in the same envelope, one yearly subscription to THE BLACK CAT, together with 50 cents to pay therefor. On subscriptions to foreign countries 24 cents must be added for postage. All money should be sent by draft, postal money order, express money order or registered letter. One- or two-cent postage stamps in perfect condition will also be accepted. If competitors are already subscribers to THE BLACK CAT or submit more than one manuscript, their existing subscriptions will, if desired, be extended or the new ones may be taken in the names of other parties. Any competitor may send as many stories as desired, but with each story all conditions must be complied with.

5. All envelopes containing manuscripts as above must be plainly marked "For Competition" and addressed, "The Shortstory Publishing Company, 144 High Street, Boston, Mass." Their receipt will be acknowledged.

6. The competition will close February 26, 1902. The awards will be paid within 60 days thereafter, and announced in the earliest possible issue of THE BLACK CAT. Should two stories of equal merit be considered worthy of a prize, the prize will be either doubled or divided.

7. For stories unsuccessful in the competition but deemed desirable, we will either award special prizes, of not less than $100 each, or make a cash offer. All unsuccessful manuscripts, submitted as above, will be returned after the contest has closed. The conditions and requirements being here fully set forth, we cannot enter into correspondence relative thereto.

Important. As no story will be considered unless all the above conditions are complied with, competitors should make sure that their manuscripts are prepared strictly in accordance therewith, are securely sealed in strong envelopes, and fully prepaid. Don't hold your story till the latest moment, but send it as soon as ready, thus facilitating earliest possible decision.

The Shortstory Publishing Company, Boston, Mass.

Cook's Flaked Rice

How to Prepare

All Grocers

1. Pour the dry flakes from the package into a colander
2. Put a liberal amount of salt into a little boiling water
3. Pour the boiling salted water on the rice, through the colander
4. Drain, shake slightly, and turn out on a hot dish; serve with sugar and milk. That is all—and the rice is perfectly prepared in less than a minute

Book of tested recipes in every package

COOK'S FLAKED RICE has the endorsement of the family physician, the specialist, and the athletic instructor as a perfect food for every member of the family. Light, nourishing and easily digested.

COOK'S FLAKED RICE tempts the most capricious and satisfies the strongest appetite.

COOK'S FLAKED RICE is not advertised specifically as an infant's food, nevertheless it is a perfect one.

$2.95 WOOL RAINCOAT
 A REGULAR $10.00 WATERPROOF RAINCOAT OR MACKINTOSH AND A HANDSOME FALL OVERCOAT COMBINED for only $2.95. SEND NO MONEY out and send to us, state your height and weight, state the number of inches around body at breast taken over vest under coat close up under arms, and we will send you this coat by express C. O. D. subject to examination. Examine and try it on at your nearest express office and if found exactly as represented, the most wonderful value you ever saw or heard of, the equal of any waterproof coat you can buy at $10.00 to $12.00, $2.95 and express then pay our special price $2.95 and express charges. If you live over 500 miles from Chicago cash in full ($2.95) must accompany your order, with the understanding that if the coat is not found perfectly satisfactory we will immediately return your money. THIS COMBINATION WATERPROOF MACKINTOSH AND OVERCOAT IS THE LATEST 1902 STYLE, is easy fitting, made from an extra quality of heavy weight genuine Georgetown imported wool covert waterproof cloth. It comes in either brown, tan or black (be sure to state color wanted) and is the very latest style single breasted by front, as illustrated, making TWO GARMENTS IN ONE. The best dressers wear this garment, both as a warm overcoat and as a waterproof raincoat. It is lined with a heavy imported waterproof woven lining, made with sewed straps and cemented seams, fancy velvet collar, sanitary arm holes. We guarantee it is such a garment as you will find only in the most fashionable city stores and there at $10.00 to $12.00. $2.95 does not begin to cover the cost of the cloth alone. There are only 300 coats to be sold at $2.95. When these are gone there will be no more. ORDER TODAY. DON'T DELAY. SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., Chicago, Ill.

Imported wool covert waterproof cloth. It comes in either brown, tan or black (be sure to state color wanted) and is the very latest style single breasted by front, as illustrated, making TWO GARMENTS IN ONE. The best dressers wear this garment, both as a warm overcoat and as a waterproof raincoat. It is lined with a heavy imported waterproof woven lining, made with sewed straps and cemented seams, fancy velvet collar, sanitary arm holes. We guarantee it is such a garment as you will find only in the most fashionable city stores and there at $10.00 to $12.00. $2.95 does not begin to cover the cost of the cloth alone. There are only 300 coats to be sold at $2.95. When these are gone there will be no more. ORDER TODAY. DON'T DELAY. SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., Chicago, Ill.

Hard Workers should wear
PRESIDENT SUSPENDERS
 Made on a comfort-giving, scientific principle. Look for "President" on the inside. Trimmings can not rust. At dealers or by mail, 50c.
 C. A. Edwards, Mfg. Co.
 Box 301 Shiloh, Mass.

ARE YOU SHORT?
Gilbert's Heel Cushions
 "Worn inside the shoe."
 Increase Height, Arch the instep, Make better fitting shoes. Remove jar in walking. Immovably placed in the heel, felt down. Do not require larger shoes. 1-2 in. 25c., 3-4 in. 35c., 1 in. 50c. per pair. At shoe and department stores.
READ Send name, size of shoe, height desired and two-cent stamp for pair on 10 days' trial.
GILBERT MFG. CO., 50 Elm St., Rochester, N.Y.

WOOLEN GOODS THAT WILL WEAR FOR Ladies', Men's AND Children's Garments
 Direct from manufacturers and at manufacturers' prices. Send 4 cents for samples. Large profits saved for you. Mills established in 1888.
AUTOSELL WOOLEN CO.
 Worcester, Mass.

AGENTS MAKE MONEY
 HANDLING OUR RELIABLE LAMPS. Brighter than electricity, cheaper than kerosene. Thousands of testimonials from people using them over a year. Latest improvements. Permitted by Inc. Co's. Largest factory in U.S. at styles for indoors and outdoors. Lowest prices. Retail $4 up. Sample lamp half price. Exclusive territory to individuals or merchants. Illustrated catalogue free.
STANDARD GAS LAMP CO.,
 118-120 Michigan St., Chicago.

She Likes Her Mattress,
 you can't blame her for it's an EZYBED KAPOK RESILIENT
 Mattress. She had thirty nights free trial to satisfy herself that it was what she wanted. When she found it so elegantly made, light and resilient, she sent us the money and kept the mattress. We sell all of our mattresses on thirty, forty, or even sixty nights' free trial to satisfy, and deliver at your door, express paid. Kapok is imported from Java. It is hygienic, non-absorbent, resilient, and vermin-proof. Our booklet "Ezybeds of Kapok" tells all about it. Sent free. We send a luxurious couch pillow, 30 inch square, post-paid for fifty cents for packing—no profit to us—only to advertise Kapok. Write for booklet. Write for it today.
The Bohner-Brumman Company,
 Cpt. N. Cincinnati, Ohio.

The . . . Leonard Sofa Bed
 A luxurious Sofa, Couch length, instantly convertible into a large, soft hair mattress bed, with large drawer for bedding or dresses. 30 pounds of pure hair and 100 finely tempered steel springs in every one. Ten styles, $25.00 to $60.00. Equally luxurious and serviceable. Freight prepaid. Returnable if unsatisfactory. Catalogues Free. Patented, manufactured and sold only by THE LEONARD SOFA BED CO.
 410 Erie Street, Cleveland, Ohio.

NINE DOLLARS AND 75 CENTS for this High Grade 1901 Model BRIGHTON BICYCLE in either ladies' or Gent's style.

SEND NO MONEY cut this ad. out and send to us, mentioning No. 9734, state whether you wish Gent's or Ladies' Bicycle, and we will send this bicycle to you by express C. O. D., subject to examination; you can examine it at your express office, and if found perfectly satisfactory, one of the handsomest, best and highest grade 1901 bicycles you have seen, the equal of bicycles that sell everywhere at $25.00 to $35.00, then pay the express agent $9.75 and express charges. OUR SPECIAL PRICE OF ONE CENT and the express agent will return it at our expense. THE BRIGHTON is one of the highest grade bicycles made, covered by our strongest blading guarantee. Frames of highest grade, bearings, etc., best quality spokes, rims, etc., beautifully enamelled, handsomely decorated and nickel plated.

grade 1 1/2-inch seamless tubing, finest ball bearing nicked hubs, handiwork and strongest nickel finished, hanger made, frame beautifully enamelled, handsomely decorated and nickel plated. Best equipment, including handle bars, saddle, pedals, tools, tool bag, etc. $9.75 does not begin to cover first cost of material. We bought them at a forced sale and until all are gone we will sell them at $9.75. Order today, don't delay. You never will have another such opportunity. Address SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

SIPHO FOR LADIES

A toilet article necessary in every home. Physicians use and advise it. It consists of two nickel cylinders of quart capacity, with pumps between to compress air in one cylinder and create vacuum suction in the other. Open a valve and compressed air forces the liquid from reservoir, whilst the vacuum withdraws it to the other cylinder. The SIPHO has many useful purposes; no home will be without one when its efficiency and simplicity are known.

Every intelligent woman is requested to send for booklet fully explaining its uses; mailed sealed, free on request.

SIPHO SYRINGE CO. 803 Michigan St. RACINE, WIS. or 2020 K, American Tract Building, NEW YORK CITY.

SONG WRITERS & MUSICIANS

A successful piece will bring you a fortune. We produce meritorious songs and instrumental music on most favorable terms. If you are not a musician we will compose music to your words.

GROOM MUSIC CO., CHICAGO.

"GOOD NEWS" Package and "Opportunity"

One Year only 10 cents. All about the homes and opportunities of the wonderful Northwest. Send 10 cents to Opportunity Publishing Co., St. Paul, Minn.

DO YOU COLLECT STAMPS

We sell 25 varieties unused foreign stamps, each from a different country, for 25 cents; 50 unused, many sets, 75 cents; both lots, no duplicates, $1.00. AMERICAN STAMP COMPANY, 820 S. Sixth St., Rogers, Ark.

DEAFNESS and Head Noises permanently cured. Illustrated book and month's treatment free. DR. POWELL, 23 E Huntington Avenue, Boston, Mass.

MAGIC LANTERNS STEREOPTICONS AND VIEWS

for Public Exhibitions, Church Entertainments, for illustrating sermons. Many sizes, all prices. Chance for men with little capital to make money. 200 page catalogue free.

McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 40 Nassau Street, N. Y.

A FORTUNE WITHIN YOUR GRASP!

The man who makes the most money is the one who finds out what he is best fitted to do, and does it. This means fame and fortune. It is foolish to waste your time following a wrong vocation. Our two new books, "The Secret of Power," and "Success, and How to Win It," will tell you just what to do in your own particular case to most easily attain wealth, position and power; how to become Personally Magnetic, how to read accurately the character of those with whom you come in contact, how to read their jealously guarded life's secrets and know just what is in their minds. They fully reveal the hidden mysteries of Personal Magnetism, and disclose the secret of power in every walk of life. They explain the best system of physical culture known to man and enable you to cure yourself and others of all diseases, without the aid of drugs or medicines. You can learn at home in a few days, and wield wonderful power and influence over others—make them do exactly as you wish. We guarantee success or forfeit $1000.00 in Gold. No books ever published are more fascinating and interesting than those we will send you absolutely free. Write for them to-day. Address the Columbia Scientific Academy, Dept. 9A, 1931 Broadway, New York City.

THE SECRET FREE.

CANCER CURED WITH SOOTHING, BALMY OILS. Cancer, Tumor, Catarrh, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers and all Skin and Female Diseases. Write for Illustrated Book. Sent free. DR. W. O. BYE, Kansas City, Mo.

The Face, Neck and Bust

Our method of treatment for developing the form is rational and healthful, with success guaranteed; a home treatment at moderate cost; the only method unanimously endorsed by the medical profession; booklet, "Health, Grace and Beauty," in plain envelope, free; postage, 4 cents. Women specialists in charge.

THE NATURE COMPANY

Suite 4, 41 West 24th St., New York City.

THE NATURAL BODY BRACE

CURES

Female Troubles,
Sloping Posture,
Inflammations,
Internal Pains,
Tired Feeling,
Backache,
Weak Lungs,
Nervousness.

TRIAL FREE.

It will make you comfortable, buoyant, happy—give you ability to work and enjoy life. It is simple, wholly external, adjustable to any figure. Worn with or without corset.

We have over 15,000 letters like this:

Chandler, Ohio, July 27, 1909.
Your Brace did all you said about it and more for me. It has saved me a big doctor's bill and brought me good health, which I had not had before in 25 years. My troubles were dropsy, headache, lung disease, stomach and other ills to which women are subject.

MRS. L. B. DICKINSON.

Write today for particulars and illustrated book mailed free in plain sealed envelope. Address: The Natural Body Brace Co., Box 50, Salina, Kansas. Every woman should have this Brace.

CHILDREN

TEETHING

For Children While Cutting Their Teeth.

An Old and Well Tried Remedy
FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP

has been used for over FIFTY YEARS by MILLIONS of MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, with PERFECT SUCCESS. IT SOOTHES THE CHILD, SOFTENS THE GUMS, ALLAYS ALL PAIN, CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHOEA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the World. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.

Twenty-five Cents a Bottle.

TO FAT PEOPLE

I can reduce your weight 3 to 5 pounds a week without any radical change in what you eat; no nauseating drugs, no tight bandages, no sickening cathartics. I am a regular practicing physician, making a specialty of the reduction of surplus flesh; and after you have taken my treatment a few weeks you will say: "I never felt better in my life."

SAFE, PROMPT AND CERTAIN.

By my treatment your weight will be reduced without causing wrinkles or badness of skin; heavy abdomen, double chin or other evidences of obesity will disappear; your form will acquire symmetry; complexion will be cleared; troubles of heart, kidneys, stomach or other organs will be remedied; and you will be delightfully astonished at the promptness and ease with which these results are accomplished under my system. Satisfaction guaranteed. Write for my new pamphlet, on "Obesity, its Cause and Cure," which will be sent sealed in plain envelope. It will convince you. Mention The Black Cat when writing.

HENRY C. BRADFORD, M. D.
34 East 334 Street, NEW YORK.

BUSINESS POSITIONS

are easily secured by young men and women after studying our courses in Bookkeeping and Stenography.

We teach by mail, at your home in spare time and at small expense, courses in Design, French, German, Spanish, Bookkeeping, Engineering. Write stating subject.

International Correspondence Schools,
Box 1195, Scranton, Pa.

KLIP-KLIP THE POCKET MANICURE

A unique little toilet article for the pocket. It trims, files, shapes and cleans, and keeps the nails in perfect condition. A complete manicure for man, woman, or child. Silver steel, nickel-plated, sent post-paid on receipt of price if your 25c. dealer hasn't it.

KLIP-KLIP CO., Dept. T, Rochester, N. Y.

WE GIVE AWAY FREE one rolled gold solitaire Puritan from diamond ring, solid gold pattern, for selling 20 packages Garfield Pure Toilet Gun. See your friends and send a package. Send full name; we will mail you. When sold send money; we will mail ring; you can tell from GENUINE DIAMOND.

Unsold guns taken back. Write for catalogue of 200 premiums. GARFIELD GUN CO., Box 146, Mendville, Pa.

LADIES to do plain needlework for us at home, we furnish materials and pay $7 to $10 per week. Send stamped envelope to STANDARD CO., Desk B. C., Indiana Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SONG WRITERS AND POETS

A successful piece of music makes a fortune for the author. We write music to words, arrange compositions, secure copyrights and publish on royalty.

SUCCESS MUSIC CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

SELF-PLAYING CORNETTO

You can become a talented Cornet performer in five minutes. No knowledge of music required. Wonderful as the photograph—ingenious as the self-playing piano. Already hundreds of Bands have equipped themselves with the self-playing Brass Band Instruments. Churches are organizing Bands and raising money to pay off their debts. Wm. F. Miller, leader of the above band, says: "Instruments first-class. Just what we needed. Have 14 pieces Band. Intend to enlarge it. Have had one concert. Was a great success."

SPECIAL OFFER 25c.

To commemorate this wonderful invention we will send a sample of our Self-Playing Cornetto prepaid for the with our illustrated catalogue. Trade-mark "Zozo" on every instrument.

STRAUSS MFG. CO.
142-146 W. 14th St., Dept. 20, New York.

Address your orders plainly to

EIGHT DOLLARS and 95 Cts

BUY THIS HIGH GRADE, HIGH ART
FIVE-DRAWER SOLID POLISHED ANTIQUE OAK CABINET DRAP HEAD Genuine OHIO SEWING MACHINE. You need not send one cent, but cut this ad. out and send to us, and we will send the machine to you by freight C. O. D., subject to examination, you can examine it at your railroad station and if found perfectly satisfactory, strictly high grade and equal to sewing machines that retail at $30.00 to $40.00, then pay the railroad agent OUR SPECIAL PRICE, $8.95 and freight charges, with your order you will save $0 to $5 cents express charges on return of money to us, (nearly every one sends cash) THREE MONTHS' FREE TRIAL. We agree to return your money any time within three months if you become dissatisfied for any reason. Every machine guaranteed 90 days. Only 1,500 machines to be sold below cost to build. ONLY $8.95

A BONANZA CHANCE FOR MERCHANTS, DEALERS AND AGENTS TO STOCK UP. WRITE FOR IT.
SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., Chicago, Ill.

20 COIN-OPERATING PEANUT VENDING MACHINES

FOR VENDING
SALTED SHELLED PEANUTS
Will pay in Good Locations a
Net Profit of $5.00 PER DAY
$150.00 PER MONTH.
$1,500 PER YEAR.

A High-Class Business which may be started with one machine at a cost of a few dollars and others added from the profits. When placed with stores on shores one half of receipts is profit to the owner of the machine.

JUST THE THING for people who are employed on salary to work evenings until they get enough machines to give up their position for a business of their own. Big Thing for capitalists who can manage a fine business on a large scale. A NEW PROPOSITION WITH WONDERFUL POSSIBILITIES. Write for Catalogue; it will surprise you.

OUR NEW AUTOMATIC PEANUT VENDING MACHINE may be used for either salted Peanuts or Confections. Agents Wanted, ENTERPRISE VENDING MACHINE CO. (INC.) 31-53 Franklin St., Chicago. Dept. 11. New York Office, 7 and 9 Warren Street.

Makes Women Beautiful

Marvelous development accomplished by the new and wonderful "Vestro" method of enlarging the Female Bust.

Flat-chested and unattractive women are quickly developed into commanding figures that excite wonderment and admiration.

A new and surprisingly effective home treatment has been discovered that enlarges the female bust at least six inches. Women who are not lacking in this respect will not be particularly interested, but those who by some unfortunate circumstance of health or occupation are deficient in this development will be very much fascinated by the peculiar prominence achieved by the treatment. It is called "Vestro" and is controlled by the well known Annum Medicine Co.

There is no doubt about the marvelous power of this new treatment to develop the bust to a gratifying extent. Any lady who wishes to know more about Vestro should send her name and address to the Annum Medicine Co. They will send free, in plain sealed envelope by mail, a new "beauty book" they have just prepared, also photographs from life showing the actual development induced and a great number of testimonials from physicians, chemists and prominent ladies all commending the wonderful and remarkable power of Vestro to enlarge the bust no matter how flat the chest may be. Do not fail to write at once. The beauty book and portraits will delight you. All you need do is to send name and address and a two-cent stamp to pay postage. Address: ANNUM MEDICINE CO., Dept. B, 44, 55 State St., Chicago.

FAT

How to reduce it
Mr. Hays Hays, 344 E. 40th St., New York City, writes:
"I weighed my weight 40 lbs. three years ago, and I have not gained an ounce since. Purely vegetable, and harmless as water. Any one can make it at home at little expense. No starving. No doctors. We will send a box of it and full particulars in a plain sealed package for 5 cents for postage, etc."

Hall Chemical Co.,
Dept. K A, ST. LOUIS, MO.

THE OPIUM HABIT

Cannot be permanently cured

by the ordinary unscientific methods. If you are addicted to the drug habit and want to be cured without any suffering, publicity or detention from business, by a remedy that completely restores the nervous system to its normal condition, communicate at once with F. W. BARBER, M.D., 945 Broad St., Newark, N. J. Residence, Arlington, N. J. All letters of inquiry returned if desired.

OPIUM MORPHINE habit cured in 10 to 20 days. 30,000 cases cured. NO PAY TILL CURED. Address DR. J. L. STEPHENS CO. Dept. B.9 Lebanon, Ohio.

MYSELF CURED I will gladly inform anyone addicted to COCAINE, MORPHINE, OPIUM OR LAUDANUM, of a never-failing harmless Home Cure. Address MRS. W. I. BALDWIN, P. O. Box 1212, Chicago, Ill.

MORPHINE

habit. Contains Vital Principle heretofore unknown and lacking in all others. We restore the nervous and physical systems and thus remove the cause. Confidential correspondence invited from all.

HOME CURE
PAINLESS AND PERMANENT
A Trial Treatment Free.

Sent to anyone addicted to the use of Morphine, Opium or other drug. We restore the nervous and physical systems and thus remove the cause. Confidential correspondence invited from all.
ST. PAUL ASSOCIATION, 46 B Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

J. M. Hanson's Magazine Agency

LEXINGTON, KENTUCKY

$5.50 OFFERS VALUE FOR $2.75

Sent to one or different addresses—The periodicals in any combination offer will be sent to one or different addresses. Join with your friends and take all. The subscriptions may be either new or renewal, except where otherwise stated. For $1.00 extra added to the prices of the combinations containing Review of Reviews or Current Literature, present subscribers may renew their subscription to either one of these two magazines.

ALL SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE FOR ONE FULL YEAR.

The Black Cat	$0.50	$5.50 WORTH Send Us Only
The $10,285 prize stories will appear in The Black Cat during 1903.
Review of Reviews (new)	2.50	$2.75 (Personal ch'ks accepted.) For All Four
Current Literature (new), or New England Magazine may be substituted.	3.00
Cosmopolitan or Leslie's Monthly	1.00
The Designer or Household or Good Housekeeping or Popular Science News (new) may be substituted.
Success	1.00

				Reg. Price	Club Price
THE BLACK CAT, Success, and Leslie's Weekly				$5.50	$3.00
THE BLACK CAT, Review of Reviews (new), Success, and Munsey's (or Junior Munsey)				5.00	3.10
THE BLACK CAT, Cosmopolitan, Leslie's Monthly and Success				3.50	2.25
THE BLACK CAT, Munsey's, Success, Cosmopolitan and Leslie's Monthly				4.50	3.10
THE BLACK CAT, Success, Review of Reviews (new), Munsey's and Cosmopolitan				6.00	3.65
THE BLACK CAT, Popular Science News (new), Review of Reviews (new), Success, and Cosmopolitan				6.50	3.25
THE BLACK CAT, Review of Reviews (new), Cosmopolitan, Success, and Leslie's Monthly				6.00	3.25
THE BLACK CAT, Success, Current Literature (new), and Review of Reviews (new)				7.00	3.25
THE BLACK CAT, . 1 year, $0.50	Less Than Half	THE BLACK CAT, . 1 year, $0.50	Send Us Only
Success, " 1.00	$5.25	Judge, " 5.00	$6.65
Review of Reviews (new) " 2.50		Munsey's or Jr. Munsey, " 1.00
Current Literature (new) " 3.00		Success, " 1.00
North Am. Review (new) " 5.00	For All Five	Cosmopolitan or Leslie's, " 1.00	For All Five
THE BLACK CAT, . 1 year, $0.50	Less Than Half	THE BLACK CAT, . 1 year, $0.50	Send Us Only
Review of Reviews (new) " 2.50	$5.00	Pop. Science News (new) " 1.50	$3.50
Success, " 1.00		Success, " 1.00
Leslie's Illus Weekly, " 4.00		Birds and Nature, " 1.50
New England Magazine, " 3.00	For All Five	Leslie's or Cosmopolitan, " 1.00	For All Five
THE BLACK CAT, . 1 year, $0.50	Cut in Half	THE BLACK CAT, . 1 year, $0.50	Send Us Only
Review of Reviews (new) " 2.50	$5.50	Current Literature (new) " 3.00	$3.25
The Critic " 2.00		Good Housekeeping, " 1.00
Success, " 1.00		Success, " 1.00
North Am. Review (new) " 5.00	For All Five	Designer or Household, " 1.00	For All Five
THE BLACK CAT, . 1 year, $0.50	Less Than Half	THE BLACK CAT, . 1 year, $0.50	Send Us Only
Leslie's Illus Weekly, " 4.00	$4.50	Munsey's or Jr. Munsey, " 1.00	$3.25
Success, " 1.00		Success, " 1.00
Household or Cosmopol'n " 1.00		Am. Boy or Recreation, " 1.00
New England Magazine, " 3.00	For All Five	Cosmopolitan or Leslie's, " 1.00	For All Five

In all combinations The Black Cat is included at 50 cents, which price cannot be cut.

SUBSTITUTIONS: A new subscription to REVIEW OF REVIEWS, a new subscription to CURRENT LITERATURE, and a new or renewal subscription to NEW ENGLAND MAGAZINE, may be substituted for each other. COSMOPOLITAN, LESLIE'S MONTHLY, GOOD HOUSEKEEPING, DESIGNER, THE HOUSEHOLD, AMERICAN BOY, EV'RY MONTH, RECREATION (new) and POPULAR SCIENCE NEWS (new), may be substituted for each other. No other changes can be made in these offers.

$4.00 for $2.65 SUCCESS or COSMOPOLITAN, or any dollar magazine named above, the three, one year $2.65. Harper's Magazine may be added to any of the above combinations for $3.35. Regular price, $4.00.

The Youth's Companion (including the November and December numbers free, and calendar for 1903) may be added for $1.75.

Club raisers and agents wanted to take orders for our combination offers. Our catalogue for 1903, of 3,000 periodicals, will be ready November 1. Ask for it. Address all orders to

J. M. HANSON, MAGAZINE AGENCY, 110 Hanson Bldg., Lexington, Ky.

Just Published

A Book of Monologues

Translated from the French and Italian by Members of the BELLEVUE DRAMATIC CLUB OF NEWPORT

Price, 25 cents

CONTENTS

THE PROFESSOR OF ELOCUTION

By GUSTAVE GOETSCHY

A TRIP THROUGH MY POCKETS

By CHAS. MONSELET

A JOURNEY TO * * * *

By CHAS. CROS

FROM CALAIS TO DOVER

By E. D'HERVILLY

SERGEANT BRIDELL'S LETTER

By ÉMILE DURANDEAU

THE FIRST LOVE LETTER

By JACQUES DE BIEZ

ON THE EVE OF THE WEDDING

By JULES DE MARTHOLD

THE DOOR IS LOCKED

By LEON SUPERSAC

THE INVITATION TO THE CHRISTENING

By JACQUES DE NORMAND

BY THE CRADLE

By E. LEGOUVE

Sent, postpaid on receipt of price, by

BAKER, 5 HAMILTON PLACE, BOSTON, MASS.

To all Who Suffer from

Spinal Deformities

88 per cent. cheaper than the old methods. 100 per cent. better. Weighs ounces where others weigh pounds. For Men, Women and Children; none too young, none too old to be cured.

We offer the only Scientific Appliance ever invented for the relief and cure of this painful condition: cured Mr. P. B. Sheldon, the inventor, of curvature of the spine of 30 years standing.

Throw away the cumbersome and expensive plaster-of-paris and sole-leather jackets.

Our Appliance is light in weight. Unlike any corset to the body as not to evidence that a support is worn. It is constructed on strictly scientific anatomical principles, and is truly a godsend to all sufferers from spinal troubles, male or female. We also make Scientific Appliances for protruding abdomen, weak back, stooping shoulders. Send for free booklet and letters from physicians, physical instructors, and those who know from experience of our wonderful appliances. Satisfaction guaranteed. Price, $4 to $25.

STEAMBOAT, N. Y., Feb. 9, 1901.

After having worn the plaster-of-paris jacket, I can truthfully say your appliance is far more comfortable to wear. It corrects curvature quite as well and fits the body so perfectly that no one would suspect I was wearing one. You have my life-long gratitude and well wishes. I am, Sir, your obedient servant, J. H. H. H.

The plaster-of-paris jacket above mentioned weighed 8.14 lbs. The Philo Burt Appliance put on its place weighed 17 ounces—a difference of 115 ounces.

THE PHILO BURT MFG. CO.

33 THIRD ST., JAMESTOWN, N. Y.

JUST LOVELY The Dolls and Watches we give free for selling is hot and scorching. Send your name and address and we mail the pins, also our illustrated Premium List.

EXCELSIOR NOVELTY CO.
Dept. B, Providence, R. I.

OF VITAL INTEREST

TO EVERY LADY

Corisque

is a thoroughly reliable system for Form Development. Conspicuously different in principle. Certain in results. Economical in price and time. Guaranteed to permanently rearrange the form and perfect the contour of the neck and shoulders. Send 2c. for booklet showing perfect development and how to obtain it. You will be impressed with its logic and common sense.

THE MADAME TAXIS TOILET CO.

350 63d Street, Chicago, Ill.

MORPHINE!

Opium, Cocaine, Laudanum and Kindred Drug Habits on the Increase.

In Many Light Cases a Free Trial Bottle of Our Clean Remedy Effects a Permanent Cure.

A ten days' free trial that will be of vast benefit, even though you continue the treatment no further. The trial will demonstrate the merits of this wonderful cure, and you will know where to obtain relief and freedom—at any time.

If you write the St. James Society to-day you can do so in the strictest confidence. We will return your letters if you desire. We keep all names locked securely in a steel vault, and never under any circumstances divulge the same.

Our remedy contains vital principles, never used by the medical profession heretofore in the treatment of these habits.

A leading society woman of Lynn, Mass., is so delighted with the results of our treatment that she cannot thank us enough. In a recent letter she said:

"I sincerely wish it were within my province to thank you for what you have done for me. You have saved my life and reason, and I hope God will bless you and yours."

Our remedy will give more comfortable support to the system than all the opiates you could pump into your system, at the same eliminating all poisons and restoring functions to their normal conditions.

A prominent merchant of Homer, N. Y., who has taken our treatment for a short time, writes:

"A trial bottle of your remedy came duly to hand, and with that alone a perfect cure was effected, for I have not used the drug—after beginning your treatment and now am a free man. I begin to eat well and sleep well. Thanking you for your kindness and hope you are enjoying God's choicest blessing. I am your grateful friend forever."

No matter how long the person has been addicted to the habit, no matter what quantity of the drug they are using, even though the case has been pronounced "hopeless" by physicians, oftentimes these very seemingly refractory cases yield readily to our treatment. We will cheerfully send a free trial bottle to all who are desirous of giving this wonderful cure a fair test. One patient writes: "Surely it is a gift from God."

Now, we do not claim to perform miracles. The remedy is a clean medicine, scientifically prepared by those who have made this class of disease a life study, who do not believe in the old-fashioned "gradual reduction" methods, which only gradually reduce the strength of the victim. Our wonderful system of records enables us to follow the progress of the patient daily.

The closest feeling of confidence always exists between our medical director and the patients. All correspondence in plain envelopes, all goods shipped in plain packages.

These people require encouragement, which is seldom given them by friends or physician. Send us a statement of your case—to-day. You will get considerable help free of charge.

Surely there must be great merit in a medicine introduced by this corporation three years ago, when the great antidote was almost their only possession. To-day we ship remedies to all parts of the earth. To over 4,000 physicians. To 84 sanitariums who use only our treatment. Our business is larger than all other "cures" combined.

Although we do not publish names we have on our files thousands of unsolicited testimonials, letters of heartfelt praise from thousands whom we have restored to health and given many years of happiness, who before were hopeless.

Freely address the ST. JAMES SOCIETY at their general offices, SUITE NO 659, 1181-1183 BROADWAY, NEW YORK, N. Y., in strictest confidence. The medical director of the association will cheerfully give, free of charge, any information or advice. Write at once.

"A United America."

THE PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

At Buffalo, N. Y., arranged in the interests of the commercial and fraternal relations of "all the Americas," is described and illustrated in "Four-Track Series" No. 15, issued by the

NEW YORK CENTRAL.

This folder contains information valuable to travellers regarding Buffalo, the Exposition, and the train service of the New York Central; also maps in colors of Buffalo and the Exposition grounds.

A copy of No. 15, the "Pan-American Exposition and Express" sent free, postpaid, to any address on receipt of a postage stamp by George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent, New York Central Railroad, Grand Central Station, New York.

Big Four

The 'Buffalo
Route'
to

The Great Vacation Country of the East

EASTERN AND NORTHERN NEW ENGLAND—CANADA

Low Rates
Fast Trains Between
New England
Points and the Pan American Exposition
Buffalo
Pan American Pamphlet Mailed to any Address

SIZE OF PORTFOLIO VIEWS, 4 X 6 INCHES

PORTFOLIOS

Comprising a series of beautiful Half-Tone Reproductions of Photographs illustrating New England Scenery

New England
Lakes

Rivers of New England

Mountains of
New England

Seashore of New England

Picturesque New England (Historic—Miscellaneous)

will be mailed upon receipt of 6c. each

Fast Train, with modern Pullman Equipment, to all principal points, via

BOSTON & MAINE RAILROAD

Address Passenger Dept. B. & M. R. R., Boston, D. J. FLANDERS, Gen. Pass. and Tkt. Agent

OIL--SMELTER--MINES.

Douglas, Lacey & Co.

Bankers, Brokers, Fiscal Agents,
Members N. Y. Consolidated Stock Exchange and Los Angeles, Cal., Stock Exchange.

66 BROADWAY AND 17 NEW STREET, NEW YORK.
DIVIDEND-PAYING MINING, OIL AND SMELTER STOCKS, LISTED AND UNLISTED, OUR SPECIALTY.

Booklets giving our successful plan of realizing the large profits of legitimate mining, oil and smelter investments, subscription blanks, full particulars, etc., sent free to any interested on application.

BIRANCHES — Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago,
Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Hartford and New Haven, Conn., Prescott, Ariz., Los Angeles, Cal.,
St. John, N. B., Montreal, Toronto, & London, Eng.

BE YOUR OWN BOSS

Why Work for Others?

MANY MAKE
2,000.00
A YEAR.

You have the same chance. Start a Mail-Order Business at your home, in any town or village. We tell you how. No license required. Big Mail Orders, Money coming in daily.
Large profits. Everything furnished. Our long experience is at your service. If you want to begin, write at once for our "Starter" and FREE particulars.

B. C. KRUEGER CO., 155 Washington St. Chicago, Ill.

A Dollars worth of Trick-and-Make-Ups, sent by mail for 50 cents.
Whiskey or Gin. A Also Mountain or Full Blood, Robo, Galway, Irish or Sile Whiskey, any color, a Bottle of Spirit Gum to stick them on,
Box of Prepared Burnt Cork to blacken up, Lin. Rubber Mouth big tooth Sword and Apparatus for performing the Great Vanishing Half-Dollar Trick. Ours for Love a novelty sure to please. Mention the name you wish to have and I will give a heavy GOLD-PLATED RING Free, and my large Illustrated Catalog of Plays, Wigs, Tricks and apparatus is at your service. Chas. Marshall, Mfr. Longport, N. Y.

I Print
My Own
Cards
Circulars,
Books, Newspaper

Card Press $5
LARGER, MIN
Money saver, maker. Typesetting easy, rules sent. Write for catalog, presses,
type, paper, &c.
to
THE PRESS CO.,
Meriden, Conn.

ENGINEERING TAUGHT BY SPECIALISTS

The American School of Correspondence offers ambitious people, who wish to make their leisure contribute to their intellectual growth, an opportunity to do systematic studying at home under able teachers. It is located in Boston, the home of three of the foremost technical schools. The instructors are graduates of these schools, selected for their experience and fitness. The advanced subjects are conducted by teachers in these schools.
The courses offered are

Mechanical, Electrical, Locomotive, Marine, Textile

ENGINEERING

Heating Ventilation and Plumbing, Mechanical Drawing,

INCLUDING Isometric, Perspective, Descriptive Geometry, etc.

An excellent opportunity for private instruction or review in Algebra, Geometry and Trigonometry, the Natural Sciences, Mechanical Drawing, etc.

To demonstrate the high standard of instruction, every student enrolling before November 1st will receive a complete set of PREMIUM OFFER . . . Instruction Papers, bound in half morocco, forming an invaluable reference library.

Large Hand-book giving full information as to courses and terms may be had on application.

American School of Correspondence (Chartered by the Commonwealth of Mass.)
Boston, Mass., U. S. A.

A Missouri Man Made

$25,000.00 in one year growing GINSENG

on half an acre. Easily cultivated; hardly everywhere in U. S. Can be grown in small gardens as well as on farms. Most profitable crop; complete book 10 cents. Circulars free.

Chinese-American Ginseng Co.
Joplin, Mo. (Dept. A.)

YOUR FORTUNE

In life clearly revealed. I have astonished thousands with my wonderfully correct Horoscopes of their life, past, present and future. I correctly treat your love affairs, domestic troubles, business and financial troubles. Send your date of birth, sex and full postage for my great Review on Astrology, my seven testimonials and a personal typewritten. TRIAL HOROSCOPE of your life, all FREE. PROF. H. EDINOS, R.C. Binghamton, N. Y.

SEND ONE DOLLAR

on this ad. and send to us, mention No. 95M, and we will send COLTON HIGHEST this genuine COLTON GRADE
DOUBLE BARREL HAM-
MERLESS, BREECH-LOAD-
(INC. SHOTGUN) by express.
C. O. D., subject to examination.

PRICE $15.95
less the $1.00 sent with order, or $14.95 and express charges, but if not perfectly satisfactory return it at our expense and we will return your $1.00. This is a genuine Colton All American high grade double barrel ham-merless breech loading shotgun, no stronger shooting gun made in gauge, 30 or 32-inch barrels, weight 8 to 8 1/2 pounds, choke bored, bar locks, finest laminated steel barrels, extension rib, top break, patent safety pistol grip, fancy colored grip and fore end, made for black or smokeless powder, a regular $30.00 gun for $15.95. ORDER TODAY. DON'T DELAY. Address

YOU CAN EXAMINE IT at your express perfectly satisfactory, exactly as represented. A GENUINE COLTON GUN, one of the best hammerless shotguns on the market, and the equal of any hammerless gun you can buy elsewhere at $30.00 to $40.00, then pay the express agent our SPECIAL

SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., Chicago, Ill.

$1.50 DRESS GOODS OFFER

A BIG 6-YARD DRESS PATTERN

Norton fast black, mercerized crepon dress goods, 40 inches wide, will be furnished for a big 6-yard dress pattern, at 25 cents per yard for $1.50. $1.50 per yard in any quantity we will furnish this handsome imported black mercerized crepon dress goods, our new Fall and Winter fabric, as the equal of any fancy black dress goods you can buy from your storekeeper at home, at 50 to 75 cents per yard. SEND US $1.50 per yard for as many yards as you wish, cut to size (No. 5711) and send to us and we will send the dress goods to you with the understanding, that if not found perfectly satisfactory, exactly as represented, the greatest value you have ever seen, the equal of any dress goods you can buy from your storekeeper at home at two to three times the price, you can return the goods to us at our expense, and we will immediately return your money. THIS IS A GENUINE NORTON FAST BLACK MERCERIZED CREPON DRESS GOODS, 40 inches wide, a new up-to-date fabric for dresses for all classes and all ages, a good year guarantee for service, woven with a very handsome raised crepon effect in because of this pattern. They are goods we bought direct from one of the largest mills under guarantee for quality, and our price is less than dealers can buy in any quantity. It is the GREATEST VALUE EVER OFFERED IN BLACK DRESS GOODS. IF YOU WANT A HANDSOME BLACK DRESS FOR FALL AND WINTER, one of the genuine Norton mercerized crepon, one of the latest effects for this season, such a dress pattern as you could not buy elsewhere at less than $1.50 to $1.95, do not fail to cut this ad. out and send to us with $1.50 and we will send the dress pattern to you by return express, your money to be refunded if the goods are not perfectly satisfactory. The express charges on one dress pattern will average from 15 to 20 cents. If you order two or more dress patterns the express charges on each pattern will be reduced from 15 to 10 cents, according to the quantity ordered. DO NOT DELAY. ORDER TODAY. The stock will soon be disposed of. THERE WILL NEVER BE SUCH AN OFFER MADE AGAIN. Address all orders SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., Chicago, Ill. plainly to

Quail, Turkey, Deer

The New Southern Hotel at Lawrenceville, Va., will be open for the accommodation of sportsmen on, or about Oct. 1st. Situated on the Southern R. R., half-way between Norfolk and Danville in the finest general game section of the State. There are deer, turkey and quail in abundance, while a run after the hounds can be had at any time after real wild foxes. Hunting privileges over five thousand or more acres of land, with plenty of first-class dogs and guides, make this a "happy hunting grounds" for gentlemen sportsmen not surpassed by any in the South. I refer by permission to the publisher of The Black Cat. C. H. WARWICK, Proprietor.

Quail season opens Nov. 1st.

Turkey season opens Nov. 2d.

Deer season opens Sept. 1st.

BOOKS, OLD AND NEW

P. K. FOLEY & CO.,

26 Bromfield St., Boston.

Catalogues on application.

For Children While Cutting Their Teeth.

An Old and Well-Tried Remedy.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP

has been used for over FIFTY YEARS by MILLIONS of MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, with PERFECT SUCCESS, IT SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS. ALLAYS all PAIN; CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHŒA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup and take no other kind.

BLINDNESS PREVENTED

EYESIGHT RESTORED

"ACTINA" Cures Cataracts, Pterygiums, Granulated lids, Myopia, or Impaired Vision from any cause. No cutting or drugging. No risk. "Actina" is a Perfect Electric Pocket Battery. Ready for use at all times, and will cure an entire family. Success is assured. Highest references given. Write for our 100 Pages Treatise on the eye and its disease, including a full explanation of "Actina" and the principles upon which it is based—a valuable book free. New York & London Electric Association, Dept. 44, 929 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo.

The Prize on Sylvia's Head is Five Hundred Dollars

SYLVIA is the heroine of a new novel, entitled Sylvia: The Story of an American Countess. She lived abroad, and is described by one of her admirers as "the most beautiful woman in Europe." Twelve artists, known for their types of beautiful women, were invited each to make a drawing expressing his idea of the charming heroine. Their pictures are all reproduced as illustrations in the book. By a natural suggestion, all persons who like a good story and admire beautiful women are now to be asked to give their opinion of the types represented. Each reader is invited to choose from among the pictures the one which, in his judgment, is the best conception of the heroine, and to indicate the order in which he thinks all the others should rank. The person whose list comes nearest to the choice of the majority will receive a prize of $500.00.

SYLVIA: The STORY of an AMERICAN COUNTESS

By EVALYN EMERSON. With pictures of the heroine by ALBERT D. BLASHFIELD, CARLE J. BLENNER, J. WELLS CHAMPNEY, HOWARD CHANDLEE CHRISTY, LOUISE COX, JOSEPH DE CAMP, JOHN ELLIOTT, C. ALLAN GILBERT, ALBERT HERTER, HENRY HUTT, ALICE BAEBER STEPHENS, A. B. WENZEL.

The book itself is a charming and clever love story, readable and interesting from cover to cover. The voting is very simple. Each volume contains full particulars and a slip on which the reader is to register his choice. It is a matter on which everyone will naturally have an opinion; and the prize of $500.00 is worth guessing for. Order through the book stores, or send $1.50 direct to the publishers.

Small, Maynard & Company, 17 Pierce Bldg., Boston

"REVERSIBLE"
Sinene
Collars & Cuffs.

MANY ADVANTAGES.

Perfect in fit, never ragged or uncomfortable. Very convenient, stylish, economical. Made of fine cloth and exactly resemble linen goods. Turn down collars are reversible and give double service.

NO LAUNDRY WORK.

When soiled, discard. Ten collars or five pairs of cuffs, 25c. By mail, 30c. Send 6c. in stamps for sample collar or pair of cuffs. Name size and style.

REVERSIBLE COLLAR CO., Dept. O, Boston.

Aunt Jerusha's Quilting Party.

Four male, twelve female characters. A new entertainment for churches, similar in character to "The Old Maids' Convention." Such a piece has long been inquired for, and our version of "The Quilting Party" is thus born heir to a great popularity.

Price, 25 Cents, postpaid, by mail.

Send for our new catalogue of dialogues and entertainments, free to any address.

WALTER H. BAKER & CO.,

No. 5 Hamilton Place, Boston, Mass.

$1000 PRIZE AWARDED. The VIR
PUBLISHER

1189 Real Estate Trust Building, Philadelphia, Pa., has awarded Mrs. Emma F. A. Drake, M.D., the One Thousand Dollar Prize offered for the best manuscript of a book to young wives and mothers. Competent judges pronounce the book the best on wifehood and motherhood ever published. Price $1. Circulars and condensed contents free.

The Writers' Index

Gives Editors' Names.

A directory of publications using short stories. Wide Range. All Classes. Complete information as to character and length suited to each. Instruction for copy. Special directions how and where to market your ms. Sent prepaid $1.00.

INDEX PUB. CO.,

415 46th St.

Chicago.

WE WANT the names and addresses of men and women who are able to invest modest sums — and who will induce others to invest — in an organized business enterprise richer than Savings Banks and insuring permanent annual incomes of more than double the rate of interest paid by Savings Banks.

This is not a prospect, but a paid-up property, owned, operated, and backed by men whose reputation for honesty and success is national, and whose own money is in the enterprise on even terms with that of outside investors.

Business men, Teachers, Clerks, Wage-earners, Farmers, — Everyone can, by investing small amounts, insure a life income. They can also do this without outlay or obligation of any kind by forming Clubs among their friends.

Write us for full particulars and unquestioned references from every part of the United States.

NOYES & DANA
27 State Street, Boston, Mass.

The Most Delicious and the Purest!

LOWNEY'S COCOA is not like other Cocos; it is better. The flavor is better—full and delicious. It is absolutely a natural product; no "treatment" with alkalies or other chemicals in order to cheapen the process of making. No flour, starch, ground cocoa shells or coloring matter—nothing but the nutritive and digestible product of the choicest Cocoa beans. A trial will show what it is.

Sample Can ($\frac{1}{4}$ lb.) for 15 cts. in stamps.

THE WALTER M. LOWNEY CO., Dept. K., BOSTON, MASS.

Thinkers Use Postum Coffee.

SUCCESSFUL THINKERS

Nowadays Study Their Food and Drink.

Study the cause of their own bodily troubles, and when they find the subtle drug of coffee is acting badly on the curious and delicate nervous system, they have common sense enough to stop.

Many famous brain workers use Postum Cereal Food Coffee, a delicious morning cup when properly boiled to bring out the principles which it contains for rebuilding the nerve centers and bodily structures.

Furnished by grocers, 15 and 25 cents.

FROM OUR FACTORY TO YOUR HEAD

Hawes

$3⁰⁰

HATS

50000 MEN WEAR THEM DO YOU?

500 AGENTS ALL THRU IN FOREIGN CITIES

Our reputation and full guarantee stand back of every hat we sell. If you cannot get a Hawes Hat in your city send three dollars, your height, waist measure, and size of hat worn; state color and if a stiff or soft hat is wanted. The new Fall and Winter shape can be had at either of our stores.

Hawes Hat Co

835 BROADWAY,
221 BROADWAY,
1251 BROADWAY,
NEW YORK.

171 TREMONT ST.
COR. MASON
BOSTON.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

Registered by U. S. Patent Office.

goes by the special order of a distinguished physician to Paris, France, for Uric Acid Diathesis, Rheumatism, and Gout. Lithia in no form so valuable as that in Buffalo Lithia Water.

Dr. Thomas H. Buckler, of Paris (formerly of Baltimore), Suggestor of Lithia as a solvent for Uric Acid, says:

"Nothing I could say would add to the well-known reputation of the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

I have frequently used it with good results in URIC ACID DIATHESIS, RHEUMATISM, and GOUT, and with this object I have ordered it to Europe. Lithia is in no form so valuable as where it exists in the carbonate, the form in which it is found in BUFFALO LITHIA WATER, nature's solution and division in water which has passed through Lepidolite and Spondumne Mineral formations."

Spring No. 1 is both a nerve and a blood tonic, and in pale, feeble, and anæmic subjects is to be preferred. In the absence of these symptoms, No. 2 is to be preferred.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER is for sale by Grocers and Druggists generally.

Testimonials which defy all imputation or questions sent to any address.

PROPRIETOR BUFFALO LITHIA SPRINGS, VIRGINIA